Compromise Will Cost Province More

Trudeau Won't Split Over-65 Aid with B.C.

Aged Assured Whole $200

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Staff

The provincial government will stick by its promise of a $200 monthly income for citizens over 65 living in B.C., despite a federal refusal to share 50 per cent of the cost, Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday.

Following a 30-minute private meeting Tuesday evening with Prime Minister Trudeau, Barrett said the province was prepared to accept an alternate federal suggestion that Ottawa's participation be handled under the Social Assistance Act.

Extra $9 Million

The compromise, resulting from Trudeau's flat refusal to share the cost of the increase — estimated at between $45 million and $60 million — on a 50-50 basis under the Canada Assistance Plan, will likely cost B.C. taxpayers an additional $7.5 million to $9 million, depending on the final cost of the program.

Barrett drove to Pat Bay airport Tuesday afternoon for private talks with the prime minister on the cost-sharing formula which has been subject of daily negotiation between B.C. and Ottawa.

The premier later told reporters outside the Legislature, after making a formal statement to the house, that he was disappointed the federal government wouldn't agree to sharing under the CAP. He added, "We're not giving up hope and we will still continue to pursue our point.

"Meanwhile, we're not turning down federal dollars and we are prepared to go ahead with a federal proposal under the Social Assistance Act, which will mean Ottawa's contribution is about 30 per cent less than it would have been with 50-50 sharing under the CAP."

In his formal statement to the house, Barrett said his half-hour private meeting with the prime minister was "very amiable."

"First, let me state clearly that every senior citizen in B.C. over 65 and covered under the legislation before the house will be receiving as soon as possible a guaranteed minimum income of $200.

"However, I am disappointed that there is a continuing disagreement over the interpretation of the Canada Assistance Plan. The differences between the federal government and our provincial government are still a matter of semantics, but I will not let legal niceties interfere with

Barretts of Esquimalt

Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday he has bought a house in Esquimalt and that he will rent out his home in Port Coquitlam.

He said he. and his family will move into the home in late January, except for a son who will be attending Simon Fraser University. Asked where the house was located and to comment on reports the house cost $65,000, Barrett said he didn't think this was of public interest.

Workable Ad Ban 'Only from Ottawa'

By RAY DYKES
Colonist Legislature Staff

A total ban on cigarette advertising would not work unless it came from the federal government, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

Macdonald urged "all people of B.C. to apply to Ottawa with all their force for a total cigarette advertising ban."

In the meantime, the NDP government would restrict such advertising in B.C. by banning billboard promotion of cigarettes and insisting that all United States cigarette packets carried the warning that the surgeon-general has deemed cigarette smoking hazardous to health.

Other restrictions on advertising would be detailed during the committee discussion of the legislation, he added.

... billboards out

Macdonald told the Legislature that U.S. cigarette manufacturers were putting the surgeon-general's warning on packets within their country but not on packets sent to B.C.

"They take it off because they realize the message is effective and it does hurt sales," he explained.

By votes of 42-10 and 41 to 10 government legislation repealing the ban placed on cigarette advertising in B.C. imposed by the Socreds last year was approved in principle.

MONTREAL (CP) — The department of industry, trade and commerce awarded more than $458 million between 1967 and 1971 to 154 companies in Canada producing war materials for the United States government, says a report released Tuesday.

The report was prepared by seven university students led by Professor S. J. Noumoff of McGill University's department of political science.

The report—How to Make a Killing—says the federal government supported selected development programs, paid half the cost of modernizing plant equipment and supported establishment of production of components and materials destined for use by U.S. forces in Indochina.

The report says that 45 of the 154 companies were American-owned. These companies received 40 per cent of the money granted by the Canadian government.

The majority of the contracts were for transport aircraft, aircraft engines and airframe components, electronic navigation and communication equipment, marine equipment, vehicle components and spare parts, the report says.

Noumoff said his researchers sent out 778 questionnaires to companies asking them if they received contracts from the Pentagon.

They received 205 replies, and 73 companies acknowledged receiving U.S. defence department contracts.

The report says four companies denied receiving such contracts although the Pentagon said they had.

182 mph Wind Smashes Fiji

SUVA, Fiji (UPI) — Hurricane Bebe Tuesday swept across Fiji's largest island with winds as high as 182 miles an hour, bringing death and levelling towns.

Weathermen said the storm blew westward out of Fiji into the sea early today and was moving in a southeasterly direction.

Fiji is a group of about 60 south Pacific islands with a population of about 150,000 persons.

On Viti Levu, Fiji's largest island , towns and villages in the western districts reeled from the hurricane in which at least two persons died. A child was killed by flying debris and a man was electrocuted in a Suva suburb by a fallen power line.

At Lautoka, Fiji's second biggest town, 180 hospital patients were evacuated to an emergency centre during the height of the storm. Winds blew off the roof of the children's ward and the men's ward began to collapse as other sections of the building were torn away.

A CP Air spokesman in Vancouver said Tuesday that his company was not able to contact the airport at Nandi. For this reason, a scheduled flight to Fiji Monday was held in Honolulu and the 40 passengers involved returned to Vancouver Tuesday.

The spokesman added that he felt confident that regular flights would resume Thursday.

"At this moment there are no plans to cancel Thursday's flight," he said.

Mail Bomb Target Arab

CAIRO (Reuter) — A parcel bomb addressed to a leading member of the Palestine Liberation Organization was discovered at Cairo airport Tuesday, the official Middle East news agency reported.

The parcel, disguised as a book, was sent from Belgrade and was addressed to Farouk Al-Qujddoumi.

Pound Hits Record Low

LONDON (AP) — The pound sterling fell to an all-time low against the United States dollar Tuesday.

Selling was heavy. By afternoon the pound had dropped more than 1½ cents to $2.37575 U.S.

The pound has been floating down outside fixed exchange rates since June, when it was last set at $2.60. The British government had been expected to return eventually to a new fixed exchange rate of around $2.40.

Thieu Brands Hanoi Truce 'Cunning Plot'

UPI, Reuter

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu said Tuesday night that South Vietnam should pepare for a ceasefire but he denounced any truce which lacks a satisfactory political agreement on the fate of the Saigon government.

In a two-hour national radio and television address, Thieu confirmed that in meetings with Henry Kissinger, U.S. national security adviser, during the last two days he was presented with Communist proposals for a settlement. But he blasted the proposals as a "cunning plot."

Denouncing any truce which lacks a satisfactory political agreement on the fate of the Saigon government, he implied that while a ceasefire might be on its way in a month or two, he did not approve of it.

His repetition of the tough line he has taken against a three-part government and the insistence that any solution must be agreed on by the South Vietnamese government were remarks meant for Washington to show South Vietnamese resistance at being pushed into a settlement.

In Paris, meanwhile, the North Vietnamese delegation to the peace talks said Thieu's speech was proof that he is obstinately opposed to peace. The delegation accused the U.S. of using the South Vietnamese president as its "zealous spokesman" in its policy of prolonging the war.

Plea to U.S.: Arms for IRA Hurt Ireland

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Desmond O'Malley, the Republic of Ireland's justice minister, said Tuesday night that United States money finances a "campaign of violence" in Northern Ireland and warned Americans not to be duped into giving money which might end up in the hands of the Irish Republican Army.

"To contribute money to the IRA is to damage, grievously, the interests of Ireland and the Irish people," he said.

Arctic Ice Vanishing Act Speeding Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a definite warming trend over the North Pole and it is melting the polar ice cap even more rapidly than meteorologists had expected, Arctic flyer-explorer Bernt Balchen said Tuesday.

Balchen said he personally confirmed melting reports in a series of recent flights over Labrador, Greenland, Norway, the Canadian Arctic and the polar sea.

"We received a fairly clear picture of the whole situation," Balchen said. "There is no doubt about it, the Arctic polar ice is degrading — and maybe faster than had been anticipated.

"We may have an open ocean in another 20 years, or in no more than 40 years," he said.

In articles and speeches, the Norwegian-born Balchen previously had forecast an ice-free Arctic Ocean by the year 2000.

He contends that the warming climate, induced in part perhaps by volcanic activity in the Philippines, eventually may make possible tanker shipments of oil from Alaskan and Canadian fields, and water transport of Far North mineral products such as uranium, nickel, iron, lead and zinc.

Thieu Scoffs At Kissinger

PARIS (Reuter) — The Paris newspaper France-Soir reports in a dispatch from Saigon that President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam described Henry Kissinger as "that professor who came here (Saigon) to get his Nobel Peace Prize."

Thieu purportedly made the scoffing remark about President Nixon's chief adviser before an assembly of South Vietnam politicians this week, the newspaper's Saigon correspondent said.

Veiled Bribery

THE CHARGE of the write brigade brings a communique from T. D. McLean. McLean, a federal government ship's representative with the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, has a bone in his craw.

"It was announced that the armed forces would receive a 10 per cent pay increase 'to bring their pay into line with salaries paid in the public service.' I do not deny the forces the raise, but I would like to know to whom in the public service the comparison is made. A check of the public servants in the Victoria area, who are among the highest paid in Canada, will find very few being paid anywhere near the force wages.

"For example, a captain (old navy lieutenant rank) who is a watchkeeping officer on a ship, will now receive approximately $1,200, plus sea duty allowance per month, while civilian ships' officers employed by the federal government receive a top wage of $786 per month for the same watchkeeping duties aboard ship. This is even below a corporal.

"I am wondering if this wage increase so near an election is not just another way to get nearly 100,000 votes for the Liberals."

Mr. McLean, wonder no more — take it as a fact of life. Take it as rote that the fix was in. Take it as merely another of the sleazy vote-getting ploys used by all politicians.

The real crime, I suggest, is that they honestly believe the voting public is too dumb to cotton to their thinly-veiled bribery . . .

FROM Mrs. Fern Gibson a letter requesting a plug.

She says the Juan de Fuca minor hockey association will be holding a mocassin dance at the Juan de Fuca sports arena this Saturday night. I would usually leave this in the capable hands of our sports department, but I think the mocassin dance aspect deserves a little explanation for native Islanders not familiar with this ritual that has been a way of life for Prairie people for years. Simplicity itself — dancing on ice — with mocassins, slippers or rubber boots. Lots of fun, please don't try it with leather-soled shoes. Very tough on the backside . . .

ANOTHER PLUG, this one requested by Munro Macleod for student band members at Shoreline High School. They've got an ambitious project — a trip for the band to Denmark two years from now and they have to raise $25,000 between now and then. Project number one — the gathering of seaweed and chicken manure for fertilizer purposes. They'll be delivering the next two weekends, so if you're looking for some good fertilizer at reasonable cost, place your order at 383-9126 . . .

IF ONE tradition means anything, George McGovern will defeat Richard Nixon in the U.S. presidential sweepstakes this November.

Seems that with one exception, a good big man always beats a good little man in the presidential race. In the last 40 years the taller candidate has won every election excepting 1940 when the smaller man, Franklin Roosevelt, topped the taller guy, Wendell Wilkie. It held good last time when the 5'10½" Nixon stopped Hubert Humphrey who was one inch shorter. This time, George McGovern, at 6'1", easily tops Nixon. However, it looks like a bad way to place your bet this time around. The little guy, Nixon seems to have too much going for him . .

RUMOR making the rounds is that David Cass-Beggs will be the man to succeed Dr. Gordon Shrum as the top wheel at B.C. Hydro. Sore-Footed Barman

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has the problem of calluses on his feet which he can never get rid of. He can hardly walk when he gets home. He is a bartender and on his feet all day.

What is the best way of treating this? Would it be better to soak his feet in hot water or cold? — Mrs. A. C.

Such a growth of callus on the feet has to be the result of abnormal pressure on the feet.

Overweight can be one big factor. (How much does he weigh?) So can faulty shoes. Maybe he just hasn't been fitted properly.

But from the sound of the situation, I would strongly suspect some structural defect in his feet, with urgent need for special shoes or some correctly-designed support.

In brief, I doubt if he stands a prayer of getting over his trouble until he has the situation analyzed by an expert, which means going to a podiatrist or orthopedist.

Soaking his feet in hot water will relieve the soreness and muscle spasm temporarily, but it won't do a thing to get at the basic trouble.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How can you be sure you have an ulcer, and how different is it from acid stomach? — Mrs. J. W.

The stomach juices are supposed to be acid, but if there is too much acid, it bothers an ulcer. So the amount, along with some other factors, is important.

There's no simple way to know whether stomach distress is from an ulcer, hiatal hernia, gastritis, heartburn or some other ailment, but your doctor can distinguish them, often with the help of x-ray.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Searchers identified as jetsam a patch of debris spotted in the Gulf of Alaska Tuesday near the flight path of a missing plane that carried Hale Boggs, Democratic leader in the United States House of Representatives.

getting financial assistance to our senior citizens.

"We are in the midst now of discussions with the federal government to share the costs of our guaranteed income. We feel the Canada Assistance Plan is the proper route for this cost-sharing, but the federal government doesn't agree.

"Therefore, as suggested by federal officials, we will be going through the Social Assistance Act for cost-sharing of our program for the time being, and we expect to receive federal funds following this route. We will continue our efforts to share the cost of the pension plan under what we think is the proper legislation, namely the Canada Assistance Plan.

"To facilitate the use of our present Social Assistance Act to implement our legislative program of a guaranteed minimum income for our handicapped people, it will be necessary for this government to introduce amending legislation at this session."

Barrett said the target date for increased payments to senior citizens is still Christmas. However, he said administrative problems may force a delay until January, but promised that the December payments would be made retroactive on the first cheque.

The government has said about 12,500 citizens now receive the maximum monthly income for needy senior citizens of $191 monthly. Under the NDP plan, the payments will be a guaranteed $200 monthly for an estimated 110,000 citizens over 65 living in B.C.

The premier said federal authorities had given "a definite commitment" to share in the cost of the program under the welfare legislation.

Asked if the federal stand was an election ploy, Barrett replied: "Everything is an election issue. It's now up to the voters on Monday. I made my position very clear. I'm voting NDP and the prime minister said he is voting Liberal."

The premier added he felt it would be "terrific" if B.C. returned a large contingent of opposition members to the House of Commons in the election.

In the house late Tuesday night, Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said he would be prepared to name names and companies who "sweat money" from senior citizens getting the guaranteed $200 a month.

Some pensioners had received notice of rent increases already, he said.

Levi appealed to all those who rent to senior citizens. He said the government was trying to make up "20 years of neglect" and didn't intend to see the increases go down the drain because some landlords wanted to make another buck.

The minister said the government would make a decision in three or four weeks whether to set up food co-operatives for "people generally" in an effort to combat rising prices.

"We are going to have to create a form of competition to show the large food monopolies that the average people in B.C. are not going to stand for rising costs," he told the house.

Welfare ministers from across Canada, Levi said, will meet in Victoria next month, and B.C. would be making its own proposals on the meeting agenda.

South Africa Trims Rand, 'Joins' Dollar

PRETORIA (UPI) — South Africa devalued the rand Tuesday night and broke of traditional links with British sterling in favor of aligning its currency with the U.S. dollar.

LONDON (UPI) — A prosecutor at the Old Bailey criminal court called it a curious case as he listed its ingredients — a wealthy businessman, a pretty model, a disputed will, a Mexican duke and a disappearing lawyer.

Buzzard gave the details as he outlined his case against Eric Alba-Teran, and a 22-year-old teacher named Shelagh Macintosh.

Both pleaded innocent to charges of forging Raphael's will. Alba-Teran also denied obtaining Raphael's Rolls-Royce by means of a forged letter.

Buzzard said a third conspirator, lawyer Roland Shulman, has left England and is believed living in South America.

MARSEILLE, France (UPI) — An Air Inter jetliner returned to Marseille's Marignane Airport minutes after taking off Tuesday because a Soviet passenger might have been forced on the flight against his will, an official for the French domestic airline said.

The Soviet citizen, identified in Marseille as Wladimir Tatevossian, 30, fought with two other Russians at the airport Tuesday morning, an Air Inter official at Orly Airport in Paris said.

He said when the three later boarded an Air Inter flight for Paris, the company contacted the French interior ministry and was directed to order the plane to return to Marseille.

After the plane landed, French police drove Tatevossian to a psychiatric clinic in nearby Aix-En-Provence, French sources said, but it was not know for what reason.

PASADENA, Calif. — A galaxy which appears to be expanding faster than the speed of light — Casting doubt on a fundamental law of physics — has been reported at a meeting of the high energy astrophysics disivision of the American Astronomical Society at California Institute of Technology here.

The fast-moving galaxy was described by Dr. Kenneth Kellerman of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, W.Va.

Earlier reports by astronomers have told a quasars seemingly expanding at speeds exceeding the 186,000-miles-a-second velocity of light — which has long been accepted by physicists as the ultimate in speed. But never before has there been a report of a galaxy moving at such speed.

Quasars, discovered only in 1963, are the brightest visible objects ever seen by man, 100 times brighter than the brightest galaxies, which are themselves comprised of trillions of stars.

Quasars also emit enormous amounts of radio waves and are located at the far ends of the universe, more than 8 billion light years away — or a distance which is 8 billion times the 6 trillion miles that light travels in one year.

Kellerman indicated that there now are two quasars, as well as the galaxy, and now both are under observation through radio sources.

The galaxy and two quasars appear to be expanding, Kellerman said, while a fourth object seems to be contracting.

The discoveries, observers said, simply add to the puzzlement of the astronomical community.

At one time there were 10 explanations of the probably impossible speed of the galaxy and quasars. All but three have been shot down and the three remaining are suspect.

One is called the "cannon ball explanation." This describes two masses moving in opposite directions, with the one traveling toward the viewer giving the impression of moving at a speed faster than light.

The second is described as the "Christmas tree model" because the masses "light up and go off" at irregular intervals.

The third simply holds that if the objects are comparatively nearby, they would not have to be expanding faster than the speed of light to give such an impression.

Kellerman also reported on a mass, called the B. L. Lacert, which was at first believed to be a star, but now is simply described as an unknown substance.

The astronomer said it grows bright and dim by turns. It is in two parts, he said, and the two seem to be moving together at great speed.

But, extremely puzzling, although the two parts appear to grow smaller as they move toward each other, their radio signals grow stronger.

Big Balloon Blocks Road

PATERSON, N.Y. (AP) — Motorists were startled here when a bright red 80-foot balloon landed in the middle of the highway. Three balloonists were uninjured, but police said there was a massive traffic jam while the balloon was deflated and removed.

Costly Frisbees No-Go for War

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Navy spent $375,000 and four years studying Frisbees to see if the flight characteristics of the plastic toys could be adapted for warfare.

It was no go.

From atop Hurricane Mesa in Utah, scientists sent Frisbees and clay pigeons spinning into the air. Tracking cameras monitored the flights from the 1,000-foot-high cliff.

The results of the tests were reported in a non-classified paper in which the navy was careful to note that Frisbee is "a registered trademark of the Whamo Manufacturing Co." of San Gabriel, Calif.

Lt.-Cmdr. Hugo Hardt, who took over the program two years ago, said the navy was looking for a new way of delivering flares.

Nude Photos, Lost Lawyer Puzzle Parts

LONDON (UPI) — A prosecutor at the Old Bailey criminal court called it a curious case as he listed its ingredients — a wealthy businessman, a pretty model, a disputed will, a Mexican duke and a disappearing lawyer.

Buzzard gave the details as he outlined his case against Eric Alba-Teran, and a 22-year-old teacher named Shelagh Macintosh.

Both pleaded innocent to charges of forging Raphael's will. Alba-Teran also denied obtaining Raphael's Rolls-Royce by means of a forged letter.

Buzzard said a third conspirator, lawyer Roland Shulman, has left England and is believed living in South America.

Shulman, Alba-Teran and Miss Macintosh produced the will, written on the back of an envelope, a few days after Raphael died in the crash of his private plane in France.

Aside from the curious bequest of 12 cents and the four photos to his wife, model Penny Brahms, the will left most of Raphael's fortune to Shulman, Alba-Teran and Miss Macintosh signed the will as witnesses.

The prosecutor claimed Miss Macintosh admitted the will was forged. He said the trio searched Raphael's apartment after his death and found an envelope bearing his signature. Miss Macintosh, he said, typed the forged will above this genuine signature and she and Alba-Teran singed as witnesses.

Alba-Teran contended the will was genuine and that he had witnessed it while Raphael was alive, Buzzard said.

Airport Scuffle Brings Back French Jetliner

MARSEILLE, France (UPI) — An Air Inter jetliner returned to Marseille's Marignane Airport minutes after taking off Tuesday because a Soviet passenger might have been forced on the flight against his will, an official for the French domestic airline said.

The Soviet citizen, identified in Marseille as Wladimir Tatevossian, 30, fought with two other Russians at the airport Tuesday morning, an Air Inter official at Orly Airport in Paris said.

He said when the three later boarded an Air Inter flight for Paris, the company contacted the French interior ministry and was directed to order the plane to return to Marseille.

After the plane landed, French police drove Tatevossian to a psychiatric clinic in nearby Aix-En-Provence, French sources said, but it was not know for what reason.

The Soviet consulate in Marseille refused to comment on the affair. Airport sources said the consulate sent a representative and a doctor to the airport to "calm" Tatevossian, a resident of Erivan in Armenia, during the morning's incident.

Whether the Russians were tourists or what their jobs were remained unknown.

Yemens Agree On Unity Steps

CAIRO (AP) — Negotiators from North and South Yemen reached an agreement Monday that outlines steps toward unifying the two Red Sea countries, the Middle East news agency reported.

In four weeks of border clashes between the Yemens, each side had accused the other of trying to impose unity by force.

Chili's Silent Day Already Silent

SANTIAGO (AP) — Chileans stayed home Tuesday in a "day of silence" to protest President Salvador Allende's programs to lead Chile "down the road to socialism."

The protest organized by the country's anti-Marxist opposition had little visible effect on the capital since a prolonged country-wide strike of truckers and shopkeepers has closed most commercial establishments.

Cafe Haiti, a coffee bar serving businessmen, was crowded as usual as the gossiping crowd spilled out onto the sidewalk of Calle Ahumada, the main commercial street.

Three More Killed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A sniper killed a teenage British soldier with a single shot in Belfast's Roman Catholic Lower Falls area Tuesay. British security forces found two more bullet-riddled bodies on a lonely road near the Irish Republic border.

The bodies were found beneath roadside hedges near the border village of Newtownbutler in County Fermanagh after an anonymous telephone caller advised police the area should be searched, an army spokesman said.

The shootings raised the death toll in slightly more than three years of Northern Ireland violence to 618.

Improved Position

MOST OF THOSE in the great mass of unemployed in Canada today, the men and women willing to work and not wanting to exist on government handouts, aren't agreeing with the prime minister. Generally speaking Canadians probably have never "had it so good" but people in trouble can't be expected to see the over-all picture. They want their own personal problems ended. And what hope does the continuation of Liberal policies hold for them?

Inflation continues to spread and the growth of the work force continues to outpace the creation of new jobs. But Mr. Trudeau is not about to change his course, and even those who have never "had it so good" might well be wondering about their own future. Will they be able to remain in their happy state, let alone make some gains?

It could be that such thoughts are behind the improved position opinion polls are said to be giving Mr. Trudeau's main opponent in next Monday's general election.

Progressive Conservative leader Stanfield is not saying Canada has never "had it so bad" as the other alternative party's leader, Mr. Lewis of the NDP, has been claiming. But Mr. Stanfield is unhappy with the Liberals' performance and, unlike Mr. Lewis, is offering what he thinks will lead to better days for all — and particularly those without jobs who want to work.

He hasn't got it all worked out, obviously, when he proposes such things as that impractical investment credit incentive plan of income tax deferment to aid small businesses. But he wants a new approach to the governing of the country which calls for greater co-operation in many areas. And here is where he could be gaining ground with the individual voter.

Canada is not going to go ahead on what the federal government alone might do. And in recognition of this, Mr. Stanfield would seek the aid of powers outside of Ottawa.

One of his first acts as head of the national government would be to convene a conference with all of the provincial governments to determine goals and priorities. Presumably it would be more than going through the motions that has been so often the case in past Dominion-provincial meetings. He has stated a regional development policy that could only be carried out with provincial participation. And he has promised close consultation with the provinces as well as the private sector of the country in the formulation of an economic development strategy.

This would be his way of attacking inflation and unemployment rather than imposing controls on wages and prices immediately. But he alone has stated he would take that drastic action, too, if conditions get much worse.

Roads and Traffic Flow

SOME OF THE CANDIDATES in the federal election, along with the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, are "talking up" what they consider to be the inadequacy of access to Victoria International Airport. The Blanshard Street "dead end" situation is more in the news now, as well, but not in electioneering although there are undertones of politics. Perhaps evolving from the two specific areas of concern will come some renewed attention to the road system of this area generally and the traffic patterns that make driving at the rush hours particularly trying.

It might be less maddening if motorists weren't so competitive in their driving, and held down their will to win for weekend golf and such. But the 19th century-engineered road system plays a big part in the frustration that local travel has become. Reconstruction and relocation of streets need to be accelerated. And at the same time some revolutionary changes in traffic channelling might be in order.

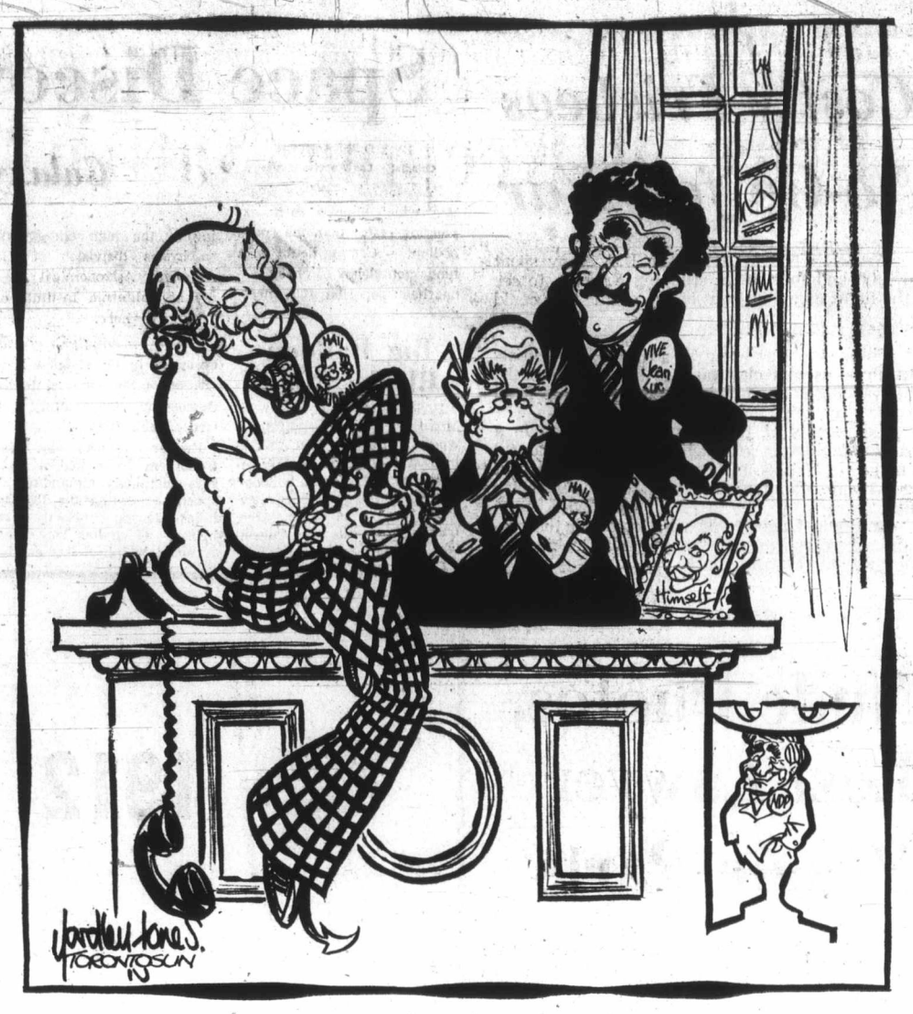
The Chamber of Commerce would be doing a real service to the public and to business by spearheading a drive along this line. Its campaign for road improvement at Patricia Bay isn't all that important; not in the tangle that traffic generally has become. The road to the airport off the new Patricia Bay Highway leaves something to be desired along its winding way, but the stretch at the terminal end makes up for it.

Now the road that goes nowhere, the city's very own Blanshard "freeway," is something else again, and priority attention it seems now to be getting is welcome indeed.

The new provincial highways minister, Robert Strachan, is taking a close look at how it can be linked with the Pat Bay highway, as was the intention when it was built through the city to the Saanich border. Failing a highway hook-up, perhaps it might be linked with Quadra Street to help the flow of traffic in and out of the city, although this would appear to be more difficult to engineer. And Quadra already is carrying a heavy load.

Meanwhile the main Douglas Street artery grows more painful to travel as the days pass by, and perhaps it is time to look once again at its curse — Humber Green, or the Roundabout, or the Fountain Circle, or whatever. The last changes that were made there, with the phased system of traffic signals, were an improvement from what it was. But increased traffic is showing that some longer-range plans could well have been carried out. Humber Green problems can only be solved by a system of over and under passes.

And even with that some one-way trafficking could be necessary, which raises another point. Wouldn't more one-way streets, not only in the downtown sector but in some outlying areas, help speed traffic flow?



"What other goodies can we give 'em — APART from jobs, lower cost of living, and all that jazz . . ."

Let's Get On a Real Health Kick

We're a Paunchy Lot

By ROBERT CAMERON

With a dearth of imaginative new proposals in our exessively dull election campaign, it's unfortunate that none of the contending parties has offered voters an athletic goal more attuned to Canada's needs than the current Olympic mish-mash of controversy and polities, or beating Team Moscow in a hockey series, with professional, expatriots on loan from the U.S.A.

Even before the results of Olympic competition this summer made it official, there was little prospect that Canada would be rewarded with prestige appropriate to the effort she made. As one forecast put it: "In Munich it will be the same old story for Canada at the Olympic Games. Too little, too late, and too few medals."

Lack of money, poor scouting, less than the best coaching, and public apathy are listed as reasons for our uninspiring performance. Of these, public apathy is clearly the key problem. With emphasis in the games long since shifted from individual achievement to "most medals," and Canada being so hopelessly outclassed in the latter, effective support for the Olympics is a lost cause. This is so even without the commercialism, hypocrisy and tragic events in Munich to underscore the fact that these games have outlived their usefulness for any nation with a claim to sensible athletic priorities.

What Canada needs right now is a "playing fields of Eton" concept for its youth, a well-organized program on as many school playgrounds and corner sand lots as possible. What she certainly doesn't need is more involvement with sports extravaganzas where Canadians shout themselves hoarse while a minuscule number of athletes fight for glory or fantastic professional salaries.

If anyone still lacks conviction that a revolution in our athletic priorities is overdue, this sobering statistic may convince him. In a sampling of physical condition by the famous Kraus-Weber tests, 59.9 per cent of North American children failed one or more of the six critical indicators, whereas only 8.7 per cent of European children did. If we tolerate this lack of conditioning in our youth, is it any wonder Team Canada had such a scramble chasing the Russians during those four evenings of truth, across Canada in September?

Fundamental for any program to make healthier, more dynamic Canadians is individual conditioning. But it isn't easy to keep people in trim. Even the military whom you'd expect to set a good example has had trouble. First DND came up with 5BX. Fashionable in many parts of the world, neither it, nor local sports, really got the attention they deserved as a regular routine.

A second push for better standards came, right after unification of the forces. This took the form of a sports program with national track and team championships, in the Olympic pattern, and with its same fundamental weakness. Much of it was soon recognized "as a demanding, expensive program which only conditioned a small part of Canada's forces." So it has lost favor and "aerobics" is now the in-thing. This is another version of personal conditioning. Since it lends itself to a simple proficiency test, there may hopefully be continued pressure to reap its benefits.

However good an example better standards in defence might be to the nation, it can only scratch the surface of the total problem. More emphasis on calisthenics and local team sport, in every school around the country, ought to be Canada's basic goal. For instance, instead of the annual frenzy over just one football team per college, why not make a completely different team (from the local league) obligatory for each intercollegiate match? And the same for hockey, basketball, swimming and tennis, etc.?

Some regional competition may have relevance to the need. But what's the use of pitting P.E.I. against Ontario in a national test? For competitors in the Commonwealth or Pan-American Games, you say? We know that such events simplify the job for professional recruiters, and make money for local merchants. But what have they really done for physical fitness?

We should leave the international sports business to professionals, where money talks and ours is as good as the next person's. We are out of the World Hockey Competition at the moment, for a variety of reasons. So we should stay out and leave this racket to nations with something to gain — such as developing the sport in their country. As for Canada tilting with the Russians from time to time, this should unquestionably be left to a team like the Leafs or Canadiens and not — if you please — the demeaning way we did it this year.

Being presently saddled with the next Olympics in Montreal, Canada can't easily opt out of this now senseless, quadrennial affair till after 1976. On the other hand, if we don't get off the merry-go-round right now, the consequences for Canada may be disastrous. Here is how one official sums up the potential fall-out if Ottawa has to rescue Mayor Drapeau from the inevitable cost overruns: "Although strategies might be devised to minimize adverse reactions in the rest of the country, it does seem unavoidable that significant political costs would be incurred. Within Quebec and Montreal, another Expo-type false boom would seem likely, along with further distortion of social priorities and a further alienation of socially aware elements."

All in all, with such a clear cause for following Denver's lead (now trying to dump the winter Olympics), it does seem that, of all politicians, our mountain-climbing, canoeing, swimming, diving, you-name-it, athletic prime minister is missing a good thing for Canada, and also a cause which might help keep him employed.

Planes for Work and Pleasure

Flying Farmers Drop in to Town

By JOYCE EGGINTON from New York

Two hundred and fifty private airplanes were recently flown into North Philadelphia airport, Pensylvania, parked in formation and tethered down by their owners. The owners — robust-looking husband and wife teams in flying kit — then took taxis to the centre of the city to attend the 27th annual meeting of International Flying Farmers.

Flying farmers are exactly what their names say they are — agriculturists and cattle breeders who own vast acreages of land, many miles from the nearest town, for which a small plane has become as essential a piece of equipment as a tractor. They use their planes as other men use cars: to do the shopping, check on their property, visit a neighbor or go on a pleasure trip.

The organization, which has 8,000 members in the United States, Canada and Mexico, is primarily a social one. Besides an annual convention, it sponsors monthly state-wide fly-ins when farmers in sparsely populated areas of Kansas, Oklahoma, Idaho and Northern California will fly as far as 500 miles to the ranch of some "neighbor" for a day-long gathering.

Because International Flying Farmers is a family organization, the day's events include a picnic lunch, business meeting, games for the children and a pot-luck supper to sustain members for the flight home. For families on isolated farms and ranches, the monthly fly-in provides their main social life.

The flying farmers created a mild stir in Philadelphia where hardly anyone had ever heard of them. "They figure we're country hicks in striped overalls and straw hats, flying little cub planes," said Ursel Thomas, a grain farmer from Brooklyn, Michigan, whose schoolteacher wife, Reva, is as keen a pilot as he is.

"Some of our members are really big operators. They run huge feed lots for 4,000 or 5,000 head of cattle which they may combine with 800 or 900 acres of corn. It's necessary to have a plane to oversee a farm that size. In an hour's overflight, a farmer can check his cattle, irrigation and fencing and even drop bales of hay for feed. In winter time when the snows begin to build up and drift, the only satisfactory way of checking on a large ranch is by plane.

"We have a friend in Wyoming whose land is spread across a mountain range. To travel from one end to the other is a hundred miles by road, and a slow drive because the road is so steep and curved. But as the crow flies it is only 25 miles and he can cover every station of his farm in 30 minutes by air."

Small farmers use their planes primarily for pleasure, and the Thomases are among them. They have a landing strip close to their farmhouse and often prefer to get their plane out of the hangar than their car out of the garage. They always use the plane when they have to make the 50-mile journey for farm supplies, and quite often they will fly to visit friends a mere 15 miles away.

Most flying farmers claim that owning an airplane is not as costly as it may seem. "We have tractors that cost more than some of our planes," said one. As for upkeep, a New York State farmer recalled that last year he had to buy 300 tires for his various tractors, totalling a lot more than the annual running cost of his plane. Also, when the farmers feel like a holiday get-together in some distant resort, the cost of travelling there is nominal. A few months ago International Flying Farmers had their own Alaskan tour. Soon they plan fly-ins to the Caribbean and Mexico.

"Most airports make us very welcome," said Mr. Thomas. "If they don't have sufficient hangar space we bring our own tethers. We are very careful and always try to leave a good impression. That's part of our code."

The organization was formed in Oklahoma 28 years ago with 38 charter members, but when the first convention was held two years later, 262 farmers arrived in their own planes. International Flying Farmers works to improve air safety standards, to encourage public acceptanee of light aircraft, to campaign for more small landing strips near supply centres and cities, and to promote the use of planes in farming.

Many of the farmers' wives hold pilots' licences. They have become so essential to the social side of IFF that the organization creates its annual hierarchy of "queens" and "duchesses" — a queen for every state chapter, chosen less for her looks than her personality, poise and aeronautical ability, with a duchess to accompany her on visiting flights from farm to farm. At the head of the hierarchy is the international queen whose farmer husband is known as the prince escort as he travels with her from chapter to chapter across the country.

"Last year's queen was away from home more than 100 nights," one state queen recalled. "She went clear across the United States and to Mexico and Canada as well. The international queen is supposed to visit every one of the 40 chapters, but she and the international duchess sort of divide up the job between them."

In between comes the business of serious farming, some members using their planes to spray herbicides, insecticides and fertilizers. But this is the one area in which ownership of a plane is no longer much help. Many of the chemicals now used in sprays can be so harmful to humans that even the most experienced flying farmers prefer to employ commercial firms to do the job.

Russia Fighting Drugs and Drink

By LAJOS LEDERER from London

An intensive drive has begun in Russia to try to curb drunkenness, alcoholism and an even graver social problem — drug addiction. New anti-drug legislation has been introduced by the Soviet authorities who are deeply alarmed about the steep increase in drug-taking, particularly among children of senior Communist Party and government officials and of the privileged managerial class.

The Supreme Soviet has just issued a decree providing for the compulsory treatment of drug addicts in special clinics. Changes have also been made in the criminal codes of a number of Soviet republics, giving them power to order treatment for up to two years. The new law also introduced much tougher sentences: offenders now risk paying larger fines, losing their places on waiting lists for housing and cars and can be imprisoned up to five years.

The new addicts — just as in the West — are mostly young people, and authority sees the habit interfering with their education and general upbringing and thus endangering the future of Soviet society. Karl Marx was clearly wrong in his prediction "that crime, drunkenness and other social evils would disappear in a Communist society."

Indian hemp is widely used and is grown illicity in country areas, often in maize patches.

As for drink, the mass media bombards the Russian public every day with articles describing the enormous damage alcohol causes not only to health, but to Soviet industry and the economy. A recent article in Sotsialisticheskaya Industriya, one of the main Soviet industrial publications, reported that more than half the accidents at work were caused by drunkenness and in some places the figure was as high as 80 per cent.

The paper emphasized that the majority of murders and other violent crimes were committed by people under the influence of drink. It referred also to the bad effect drink has on family life.

It said that in Kuibyshev province alone, excessive drink caused half the divorces in 1971. Many children of alcoholics had to be placed in the care of the state. Of 133 children in one district, 62 had been morally disturbed by their parents' drunkenness.

To drive the point home, Moscow radio recently quoted a scientist who said: "Research among a group of people who drank consistently showed that 90 per cent of them had to be relegated to less skilled jobs."

It remains to be seen whether the present campaign against drug addiction and alcoholism will be more effective than the ones conducted by Stalin before the war, by Khrushchev in the late sixties and even by the czars in the days of their rule. Heavy drinking in Russia is a centuries-old national habit, which cannot be eradicated by legislation or re-education.

What is new in the recent campaign is the admission that the problem exists and the effect it has on the Soviet economy.

Henry V's English army defeated a far stronger French force at Agincourt 557 years ago today — in 1415 — at the end of the first brief attempt to restore the Continental empire of his ancestors. The battle confirmed the popularity of the 28-year-old king and became one of the proudest moments in English history.

Shakespeare's play Henry V ineludes the battle and combines two separate expeditions to France. During the latter, Henry married Catherine, daughter of a weak-minded French king, and fathered weak-minded Henry VI.

Price of Keeping National Parks Is Eternal Vigilance

By ROBERT CAHN
Last of a Series

The forecast for the second century of national parks in the world: a rainbow—surrounded by storm clouds:

The feeling among most of the more than 500 specialists at the recent second world conference on national parks, held at Grand Teton National Park, Wyo., was that, although most of their discussions had centred on problems, the problems could be solved.

The national-parks movement worldwide would grow faster in the next decade, they felt, than it did in the 10 years since the first world conference in Seattle in 1962.

Protection of wildlife, plant life and entire ecosystems — that was the prime concern of the specialists who came from 80 nations. They also wrestled with ways to control tourism and recreation and prevent harmful effects on parks.

On the final day participants passed 21 "toothless" recommendations by show of hands and without recorded votes; those attending did not have authority to represent their countries.

Yet despite the euphoric atmosphere and the unique opportunity to exchange ideas and promote international goodwill, the conference participants returned home to realities that may present more difficulties than were evident to anyone listening to the official conference proceedings.

In unguarded moments, some of the dedicated advocates of national parks expressed concerns. Though they are park officials and conservation leaders, few are in the top echelon of political influence in their countries. Most of their parks have inadequate staff and funds. Rarely do they enjoy strong public support from the average citizen.

In the battle for priorities in developing countries, park budgets often lose out to more pressing demands of agencies concerned with food and shelter.

In some nations the progress or decline of national parks is at the whim of a dictator or of legislators who may not yet understand the true value of national parks.

And in some industrial nations, although protection of a country's natural heritage may be potentially a powerful political force, environmental leaders say they must keep constant vigil against encroachments on the parks.

Even the United States, the world leader in national parks and father of the concept 100 years ago, must cope with factors over and above the more publicized management problems of saving parks from excessive people use.

U.S. policy decisions tend in the direction of establishing federal recreation areas close to urban centres rather than adding new national parks.

Budgetary restrictions hamper the U.S. National Park Service in acquiring personnel needed to protect and operate the 91 areas acquired in the past 10 years.

Hopes for new national parks in Alaska that would include whole ecosystems are dimmed by decisions to exclude vital segments of public lands because of their mining potential.

Dr. Nicholson believes that while 20 years ago the idea of national parks spearheaded public concern for the environment, it has today been overtaken by the struggle against pollution and other causes such as mastering the population explosion.

"National parks must justify their existence not as ends in themselves, but as essential components in a new, much more environmentally conscious society that seeks to attain and vindicate harmony with the' world' ecosystem through' many different means all needing to be harmonized and integrated with one another," Dr. Nicholson says.

In their recommendations, conference participants did acknowledge the wider need. A preamble noted the effects of population growth and its impact on the world and on parks, and also that the principles applicable to saving of the natural heritage through national parks must be applied outside the parks as well.

Participants urged that wherever possible facilities for tourism be located outside the national park boundaries, and that new and imaginative systems of transportation be provided inside parks so that use of automobiles can be discouraged or banned.

The conferees also recommended that all governments take steps through legislation and administrative action to control the use of vehicles, boats, and aircraft to eliminate disturbance and damage to species, biotic communities,and other natural values.

Expressions of nationalism, often evident of international conferences, emerged only as participants vied to show slides or films displaying the scenic and wildlife wonders of their parks, or to pass around lapel pins.

The leaders of national parks of Uganda and Tanzania shared sleeping quarters while their countries were on the brink of war, and courteously disagreed at a public session over differing concepts of park interpretation.

The top Russian participant, the director of nature reserves, V. V. Krinitisky, was ebullient and eager to talk with a reporter.

Krinitsky, through an interpreter, spoke enthusiastically about the park items in the U.S.-U.S.S.R. environmental agreement just worked out in Moscow.

The Soviets take great pride in their "apovedniks" — state nature reserves devoted to scientific and educational purposes and forever withdrawn from economic, commercial, or recreational use.

Information will be shared and study teams exchanged from a U.S. national park (probably Rocky Mountain) and one or more large Caucasus reserves, Krinitsky said.

The Soviets, who are in the process of establishing their first official "national park" to encourage recreation use, can learn from the U.S. park experience in dealing with large numbers of visitors.

But Americans also have much to learn, he said, from the Soviets' scientific research and management of ecosystems in their nature reserves.

Though many of the participants pursued administrative, technical, or scientific interests, references to aesthetics frequently received appreciative applause.

As when Jerry Y. Shimoda, manager of the City of Refuge natural historical area in Hawaii, suggested that it was not enough just to consider experiences objectively.

"What happens when you pick a flower?" asked the young park official. "Other humans after you cannot enjoy it. But what about the flower — did you hear it scream?

"There is an old saying," he continued: "'I cannot pluck a flower, but I disturb a star.' Everything on earth is tied together. Man must make himself a part of the scenery and recognize that the flower, too, is a part. Look at, yes. But become a part of the scene."

The final recommendation passed by the conference urged holding the third world conference on national parks not in another 10 years but "between 1973 and 1978."

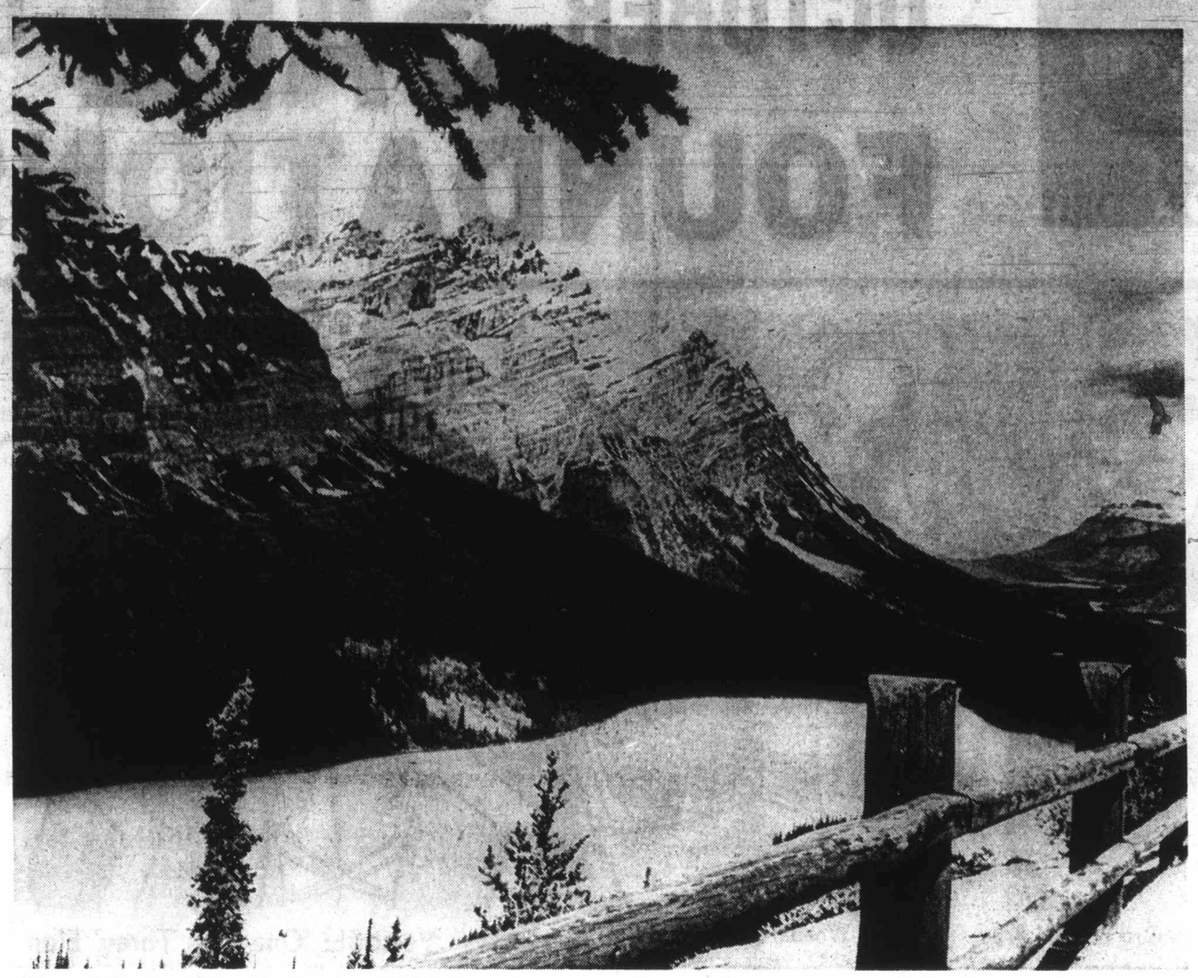
And some park officials are hoping the next conference can be held in a developing nation, possibly in Africa and linked to the next general assembly of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, scheduled for Zaire in 1975.

Commenting on a third-world parks conference, IUCN director general Gerardo Budowski expressed hope that by then all of the 43 countries which do not yet have national parks will be within the fold.

"Every country wants to show the world it does not lag behind; that they have national parks," Dr. Budowski said. "And they are learning that a national park is not just a place for tourists. It is a place for saving the natural heritage.

"But more than that, it is a place to improve the quality of life, a place to build up the human spirit, a place to make a man look a little further ahead than his present needs and see his relationship with nature."

Christian Science Monitor



Many of the beautiful national parks established throughout the world quality as "a place to build up the human spirit." One place meeting such a qualification, without question. is Peyto Lake in Canada's glorious Banff National Park.

Adamantly Opposed to Vietnam Isolation

Why Thieu Says No

By DENIS WARNER, from Canberra

In a quite real sense, President Thieu is the stumbling block in the present peace negotiations with the North Vietnamese, but not necessarily for the reasons usually stated.

It is true that the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong want him out of office and that the month's grace he has consented to before general elections would scarcely be sufficient to ensure that the representatives of the National Liberation Front had a fair chance of winning.

This is not the crux of the matter, however. Hanoi might be willing to take a chance on this in exchange for unrestricted freedom of action in Laos and Cambodia.

Thieu is determined to prevent this at any cost. Though he speaks only rarely in public about the negotiations, he is adamant that Vietnam cannot be isolated from Cambodia and Laos in any negotiated settlement.

His argument is firm and well-based. For it was in Laos that the North Vietnamese made the first moves of the war in August, 1959, and from Cambodia that they hoped to deliver the coup de grace in 1972.

Moreover, for Hanoi now to attempt to isolate the situation in South Vietnam is to attempt to reverse its own actions, since its first political move after Prince Norodom Sihanouk sought sanctuary in Peking was to declare that the war had become the war of the Indochinese peoples — meaning the people of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

As the situation stands today, the war in Vietnam is pretty much in a stand-off stage. We may see a North Vietnamese spectacular within the next few days, or weeks, but though its psychological effects could be important, militarily it would be unlikely to be of decisive proportions.

In Laos and Cambodia things are very different. After the Royal Lao government forces were pushed out of the northern provinces of Sam Neua in 1959, the North Vietnamese pressed on, their intention being to force the Royal Lao forces, and any outside backers, away from the northeastern and eastern regions of Laos.

Their reason was quite simple. Engineers were already at work here repairing the Ho Chi Minh trail, which had been first used in the closing months of the Indochina war for the attack on the central highlands of South Vietnam.

North Vietnamese troops literally sprang from the jungle and overwhelmed the shocked French garrisons, which refused to believe that an attack was possible in this area and at this time.

Laos remained of primary importance to Hanoi until 1968. Between 1965, when the Americans entered the war in force and the end of 1967, when plans were completed for the Tet offensive, the trail was expanded into a network of roads and tracks.

An oil pipeline brought fuel all the way from Vinh on the coast of North Vietnam to feed the battalions of trucks heading south with military equipment, and large numbers of troops were deployed in the defence of the complex.

Cambodia was only marginally important at this time. The sanctuaries along the Vietnam border were useful for rest and recreation and for supply dumps.

Immediately after the Tet offensive, however, Cambodia became no less important than Laos. Hanoi arranged a deal with Sihanouk — and with Lon Nol — to use the port of Sihanoukville to bring in military and other supplies and to build up the dumps so heavily depleted by the Tet offensive.

Those were landed at Sihanoukville, ostensibly for the Cambodian army, taken to Cambodian army warehouses just outside Phnom Penh and there split up, with the Cambodian army taking its rake off and the rest going in trucks run by a Chinese firm across the Mekong ferry crossings at Neak Loung and Kompong Cham.

A young Englishman living next to the ferry crossing at Kompong Cham counted the trucks as night by night they were ferried across the river. French priests and others saw what went on at Neak Loung.

To this day President Thieu believes that the North Vietnamese tanks which came out of the jungles in such numbers during the fighting at An Loc reached Cambodia through Sihanoukville. From my own inquiries in Cambodia at the time I believe this unlikely.

Yet the signficance of the arms that come through Cambodia cannot be ignored. Since then, of course, the situation has gone from bad to worse.

When Lon Nol told Hanoi to remove its sanctuaries and its troops, he had little idea how tough the North Vietmanese could be.

Today both Cambodia and Laos are all but on the point of collapse. If they felt it was politically expedient, it would be no problem for the North Vietnamese to knock them off militarily.

That precisely, is the rub. Hanoi would like to see Cambodia and Laos teeter but not fall at this time, so that they may be considered separately and later, or not at all. In other words, it wants free access to Cambodia and Laos while the political solution is being worked out in South Vietnam.

To accept this situation would spell the end of South Vietnam, not necessarily because the Laotian and Cambodian sanctuaries would remain springboards for North Vietnamese military force, but because South Vietnam could not hope to withstand all the social economic and political pressures that the North Vietnamese would be able to exert from their privileged positions.

So, on the infrequent occasions when he speaks about negotiations, Thieu is insistent that any negotiated settlement should include all of Indochina.

Since this means that the North Vietnamese would be required to go back to North Vietnam and to let the chips fall where they may, Hanoi's irritation is understandable.

Remove the North Vietnamses from Cambodia and Lon Nol's forces would certainly prevail over the Khmer rouges and the Sihanoukists. Remove the North Vietnamese from Laos and the war there will simply wither away.

Wild Escape Prevents Transfusion

HOUSTON (UPI) — A young father said Tuesday he grabbed his day-old daughter, shoved a nurse out of a doorway and nearly ran over a doctor with his car to escape from a Kentucky hospital and a court-ordered blood transfusion for the baby.

William Bergeron said he had to abandon his wife at the Fort Thomas, Ky., hospital because she was unable to race down the stairs with him and had to ride an elevator. He jumped into his foreign car and nearly backed over a doctor who had ripped out one distributor wire.

Bergeron, 25, and his wife are of the Jehovah's Witnesses religion, which forbids blood transfusions.

He said a state court ordered the transfusion because doctors feared an Rh blood factor incompatibility.

"I had to get the baby out of the hospital," he said. "I told my wife to get out of the bed. We went to where they kept the babies and a nurse, told us we weren't allowed in.

"My wife picked up the baby and I shoved the nurse out of the way and into the hall. I ran down the stairs, but couldn't wait for my wife."

Bergeron drove away and got in touch with Dr. Kenneth Riggle, a Jehovah's Witness, and the child was put under the care of one of his associates.

"The baby looks good and is eating well and is active," Riggle said. "It was high-handedness for the hospital to try to get control."

Missing Trawler Spotted

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — — The Danish trawler Nordkap, taken to sea Sunday by her cook, was sighted Tuesday 150 miles off the Scottish coast, the defence ministry said.

The 122-ton trawler, last seen weaving erratically into a North Sea storm with cook Jorgen Christiansen, 28, at the helm, was spotted off the Firth of Forth by a helicopter, and the Royal Navy fisheries protection vessel Ashton and the Dutch navy submarine Tonijn were racing to intercept it.

The trawler's angry skipper, Borge Jacobsen, was stranded in Aberdeen with two other crew members.

Congress Committee Warning:

Severe Winter Could Pinch Fuel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Urging an increase in U.S. petroleum imports, a congressional subcommittee warned Tuesday that a "severely cold" winter could result in shortages of heating oil and gasoline.

The house subcommittee on small business problems released testimony of petroleum industry witnesses who said shortages had already created a "gray market" for both heating oil and gasoline.

And the subcommittee said in an accompanying statement that "if the United States or any of it experiences a severely cold winter, businessmen and consumers alike may be unable to obtain sufficient fuel to operate their businesses, heat their homes and propel their automobiles."

As a means of supplying more raw petroleum for the refining of additional supplies of gasoline and heating oil, the subcommittee urged the interior department and the Office of Emergency Preparedness to authorize more oil imports immediately.

The department and the OEP share the administration of oil import quotas, in effect since 1959, which were intended to spur domestic production and decrease dependency on foreign supplies.

The subcommittee complained that many independent distributors were having to pay premium prices in a "grey market." And it said this might evolve into a black market if the shortages worsened.

President Nixon recently eased the quota restrictions temporarily by allowing importers to draw on their 1973 quotas through the remainder of this year. But the subcommittee said this would not help during the "worst of the winter" in January and February.

'Hoodwink'

Parley Wrong —China

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — China Tuesday opposed the immediate convening of a world disarmament conference as proposed by the Soviet Union, contending that it would only strengthen the predominance of the two nuclear superpowers.

"If a world disarmament conference is to be convened," said Chinese Ambassador Chen Chu, "it must contribute to the ... complete prohibition and thorough destruction of nuclear weapons."

The projected conference, he added, should not "lull and hoodwink" the peace-loving people of the world.

Chen spoke before the UN General Assembly's main political committee, which opened the debate on world disarmament Monday.

The United States has taken the position that convening a world disarmament conference at this time could not serve any useful purpose.

Canada Affirms Support

OTTAWA (CP) —External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp reaffirmed Canadian support Tuesday for the United Nations on the 27th anniversary of the international organization.

In a message to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, Sharp told the new UN chief that the world is indebted to Waldheim's determination to come to grips with world problems. He also praised past secretary-general U Thant for his "steadfastness," perseverance and dignity.

"The United Nations stands today, an organization of 132 sovereign states, full of opportunity for service to all who genuinely wish to achieve the aims envisaged 27 years ago. ... I am pleased to reaffirm the support of the Canadian government and people for the United Nations and its goals for the harmonization of relations among nations."

Israel Employs Captured Tanks

TEL AVIV (AP) — Soviet-built Egyptian tanks captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war have been incorproated into the Israeli armored corps and have already played a major role in some Mideast battles, the armor commander said.

This is the time of year the winter springs start to show in local waters, particularly along the Sooke-to-Victoria waterfront, where up to 14-pounders were taken last weekend.

Cowichan Bay had really good fishing over the weekend with a mixed bag of coho, chinook and a few winter springs. Pears Island, just off Swartz Bay, was another hot spot on Sunday with a reported run of winter springs.

Watered Beer Angers Dockers

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Three thousand longshoremen went on strike Monday at Durban, South Africa's largest port, complaining among other things that their beer ration was watered. They also demanded a minimum weekly wage of $34 instead of $11.30 at present, a shorter work week than the present 60 hours, and time to go to church on Sundays.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

CONSERVATIVE
ESQUIMALT - SAANICH

HE IS ASKING QUESTIONS ON BEHALF OF YOUTH . . .

About Liberal bungling of the Opportunities for Youth Program.

Why was a project conceived by Belmont Senior Secondary students to establish a day camp for children rejected out of hand, and why was the Claremont School students' application for a grant to inventory recreational facilities on the Saanich Peninsula turned down?

Why were these two projects rejected by the Trudeau clique, which was able to find funds ($9,000 from OFY and more than $30,000 from Local Initiatives grants) for a homosexual group, the Community Homophile Association of Toronto?

About critically-high unemployment in Canada's youth sector.

Why, in a nation with the abundance of Canada, can the Liberal regime not establish a realistic, long-term job-creation program aimed specifically at young citizens?

Why has the Liberal misgovernment not made full use of the facilities of the Department of Manpower to solve this vital problem?

Donald Munro, as a member of the Stanfield government, will apply himself to seeking solutions to these and the many other critical problems of today's young Canadians. He believes youth is our future and he will work to protect that future.

He will support an OFY Directorate responsible to Parliament through a Minister and a Youth Employment Division in the Department of Manpower.

About That 3 Per Cent...

By JAME SNELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minster John Turner made an election campaign speech in Calgary last week that perhaps revealed more in what wasn't said than by the actual speech.

He said there is high cost to the federal treasury tied into many of the programs being advocated by the Progressive Conservative and New Democratic parties as the politicians work towards the Oct. 30 general election.

A favorite promise of the opposition parties is to continue the 3-per-cent reduction in personal income tax which Turner's predecessor, Edgar Benson, introduced last year and which is to expire at the end of this year.

Turner said that promise would cost $300 million in 1973.

Earlier in the campaign, when asked whether he would continue the 3-per-cent tax cut, Turner said repeatedly he can not make a decision until he has a better picture of government revenues and expenditures.

Latest assessments indicate the treasury hasn't got a great deal of flexibility. The government has committed itself to some major new expenditures since Turner presented his first budget to Parliament, last May 8.

Government revenues are undoubtedly growing in line with rising incomes and economic expansion. But whether they are growing sufficiently to cover all the additional outlays, plus a continuation of the 3-per-cent tax cut, is not certain.

The Bank of Nova Scotia said last week in its monthly economic review that the federal government will have to be careful about the cash it will need to borrow in the months ahead.

It it has to cover a big cash deficit with heavy borrowings, it might strain the economy unduly.

A lot depends on the success of the current Canada Savings Bond sales drive. Last year, bond sales raised more than $2 billion. Last week, purchasers were still hanging onto more than $1.8 billion of that.

Personal savings deposits are fat, with more than $1.2 billion in non-chequeable and fixed-term deposits, a large chunk of which may be moved in the next few weeks into the new savings bonds.

If the current savings bond drive is as successful as last year's, there may be room for Turner to continue the 3-per-cent tax cut into 1973. But it remains to be seen whether that decision can be made before the Oct. 30 general election.

Pipeline Income Soars

VANCOUVER — Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., one of the natural gas pipeline companies mentioned by Premier Barrett as a possible takeover target someday, showed a net income increase from $4.8 million to $11.7 million in the first three quarters of this year. Net income per weighted-average share was $1.39 compared to 71 cents in 1971.

Bakery Transaction Sparks Completion

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

About two weeks from completion of a $1 million expansion and modernization program, McDonald's Bakery, 524 Culduthel, Saanich, has come under new ownership. The effective date of the transaction is Saturday.

"I'd prefer to say that McDonald's joined our organization," said David Devine, general manager of McGavin Toastmaster Ltd. of Vancouver.

McGavin Toastmaster is jointly owned by Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. Ltd. of Montreal and Maple Leaf Mills Ltd. of Toronto. Each owns 50 per cent of the voting stock.

Ogilvie is 99.7 per cent owned by John Labatt Ltd., a London, Ont.-based holding company that owns the brewery of similar name.

Maple Leaf, incidentally, is 14.2 per cent owned by Neonex International of Vancouver. James Pattison, Neonex principal, is chairman of the board at Maple Leaf.

The price McGavin Toastmaster paid for having McDonald's "join the organization" could not be ascertained. Neither Devine nor McDonald principal John McDonald would put a price tag on the transaction.

However, the capital involved will allow the delayed project to be completed shortly. McDonald stated that Maple Leaf was not a part owner prior to the transaction but was involved in the financing of the expansion.

McDonald will continue to operate the plant, and its 100 or so employees, some of whom work up-Island and on the Mainland, will be retained.

He said he was looking forward to the new operation, in that his firm will no longer find it necessary to transport bakery products from Seattle to Lower Mainland markets as he has been doing in the past.

"We'll be able to triple our production here to 7,500 pounds per hour and transport our bread to Vancouver by ferry," said McDonald.

McGavin Toastmaster will continue to bake its products for the Greater Victoria market in Nanaimo, sending them south daily by truck, Devine said.

Eventually, Devine added, the McGavin Toastmaster bread would likely be baked here. It had been done so previously until 1964 when it closed its bakery on Prior Street and changed to a distributor only operation with the supply coming from Vancouver by ferry.

McDonald's started as a small four-man bakery on Fort Street in 1960, and moved to the Saanich location

Lewis, General Motors Differ in Bookkeeping

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. said Tuesday a statement by David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, about GM profits "contains serious distortion of fact."

The company said in a statement that only by ignoring basic principles of normal bookkeeping could Lewis have compiled his figures.

The NDP leader, in an election campaign speech in New Westminster, Sunday, said net earnings of GM in 1971 were $272.6 million and that the company had paid $69.1 million in taxes, for an effective rate of 25.3 per cent. He said that was about half the tax GM should have paid.

GM said Lewis chose to ignore depreciation, tool amortization and interest expense as recognized costs of maintaining a viable business, which are accepted accounting practices in most countries.

It said its audited financed report, widely distributed last spring, showed that GM of Canada had a net profit of $79,763,402 in 1971 compared with a loss of $26,209,139 in 1970.

Income tax payable in 1971 was $83,023,957.

"This represents a rate in excess of 50 per cent rather than the 25 per cent reported by Mr. Lewis."

Decision Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Decision was reserved Monday by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger at the conclusion of a two-month-long British Columbia Supreme Court trial over rights in the operation of Afton Mines Ltd.

The court was told in the final day of the trial that the Afton copper ore body near Kamloops, may never be developed into a mine.

Penticton

Home Plant Called Off

CALGARY (CP) — ATCO Industries Ltd. said Tuesday it has dropped plans to build a mobile home plant in Penticton, because costs were higher than anticipated.

The company said the lowest bid of $1.2 million on the plant was 50 per cent above the budget estimate and double what it cost the firm to build a similar plant in California last year.

The Penticton property will be retained and development may be undertaken in the future if market and economic conditions make it feasible, the company said in a news release.

ATCO also announced that a contract will be let soon on a 180,000-square-foot factory to manufacture industrial living quarters. The facility in southwest Calgary could provide 150 to 200 jobs and will be three times as large as one destroyed by fire here last March.

Units produced at the proposed Lincoln Park plant will be designed to meet the needs for accommodation created by Arctic exploration and development, and northern pipeline construction.

International Lending Tops $1 Billion Level

MONTREAL (CP) — International lending by the Export Development Corp. (EDC) topped $1 billion Tuesday with the signing of an agreement to lend $21 million to a Turkish mining firm to finance half the cost of a zinc plant in central Turkey.

Jean-Luc Pepin, federal industry and commerce minister, said the Crown corporation's lending has increased to $400 million from $50 million annually in the last decade.

He said that "serious consideration is now being given to making a substantial increase in the amount of financial resources available through EDC."

The EDC's lending activities are intended to promote growth of Canada's export industries, Pepin said at a signing ceremony with Turkish officials.

The $42-million zinc plant is to be designed and managed by Surveyer, Nenninger and Chenevert Inc. of Montreal for Chinko-Kursun Metal Sanayii Co. (CINKUR), a privately controlled mining corporation.

The project is expected to provide about 500 jobs in Canada over the next two years with supply contracts going to a number of Canadian manufacturers.

Construction is expected to start in Turkey at the end of this year with completion set for December, 1974, or early 1975.

The plant, to be built in Kayseri, will produce 40,000 tons of zinc annually. About 25,000 tons are for use in Turkey while the rest will be exported, largely to European countries.

Plane Crash, Raft Wreck

He Really Tried to Reach Court

A plane crashed, a raft was wrecked and all sorts of things kept Louis Marton from getting to Victoria Provincial Court — and what's more, Judge William Ostler believed him.

Marton, a 45-year-old Vancouver resident was due for trial Sept. 11 in the traffic court section on a three-count charge of impaired driving, refusing to take a breath-analysis test and driving without insurance June 28 in Victoria.

He didn't make it, but he was in court Tuesday and told Ostler a story which Marton said "is easy to verify." Marton has an accent which was sometimes difficult to decipher but here is the essence of the story:

He was in the Cariboo and made an arrangement with a U.S. fisherman who was flying home via Vancouver to drop him off there, "but the day before they were scheduled to leave for Vancouver, they crashed up their plane."

So Marton engaged a second American to fly him to the nearest RCMP detachment at Anahim Lake. Once he got there, he found "they were changing constables" and that, for an unexplained reason, stopped his return.

However, said Marton, he managed at Anahim Lake to send a registered letter to Victoria traffic court asking for a new trial date.

Somehow or other, he next was in the Cranbrook area where he built a raft and I had it in mind to float down to Quesnel." But the water in the river was low and the raft went on some rocks.

A week later, he was at a place that sounded like Tacha Lake. He used a radiophone to talk to Prince George RCMP about getting to Victoria but nothing seemed to come of that.

Finally, a man flew in to the hospital at Tacha Lake and flew Marton out to Quesnel. After checking with RCMP there, he took a train to Vancouver, checked with RCMP there and came to Victoria.

"Please, it is hard to believe but it is true," Marton told Ostler. "It can be verified every step."

The judge replied: "It has to be true. He couldn't possibly have imagined it. He did everything but use a bicycle to get here. It's such an exciting story."

He transferred Marton to traffic court, where Marton pleaded guilty to the no-insurance count and was fined $250. Judge Harold Alder said it must be paid by Dec. 4, when Marton will finally face trial on the other two counts.

Provincial Reaction Pleases Foundation

Pacific Coast Centre foundation, objective of which is a "people centre" for Greater Victoria, is pleased with initial reaction from the new provincial government.

The foundation's project calls for a multi-purpose concert hall to seat 2,000, a convention centre for 1,500, and other facilities under one roof catering to the day-long needs of senior citizens, teenagers, artists and craftsmen.

Financing is sought from all three levels of government, and following the Aug. 30 provincial election, foundation president Allan Purdy wrote to Premier Barrett enclosing a brief on the project and inviting provincial interest and aid.

Purdy has received a letter from Barrett saying he was aware of the foundation and its aims, and suggesting its members approach Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer.

Tuesday, Purdy telephoned Lorimer's office, and was informed the minister had been advised of the foundation and its brief. It was suggested that, since there was a session of the house now in progress, a call be made next Wednesday to arrange an appointment for preliminary discussion.

"I'm very pleased with the way things are going," Purdy said Tuesday. "This shows interest on the part of the province, and efficiency in the way the matter is being handled. I'm looking forward to our meeting."

Aylard Farm Added to Park

Purchase of the 248-acre Aylard farm, prime waterfront property adjacent to East Sooke Park, was announced Tuesday by the Capital Regional Board.

The purchase price for the 1½ miles of shoreline property which includes numerous beaches, coves and meadows, is $225,000.

The property is at the end of Becher Bay Road and has long been regarded as essential for the East Sooke regional park.

Negotiations were conducted between two members of the Aylard family and regional board officials, including chairman Hugh Curtis and parks chairman Clyde Savage.

The farm has been in the hands of the Aylard family since 1916. Savage said the family wanted the property to be a park, rather than be subdivided.

With the addition of the Aylard farm, East Sooke Park will now have nearly 4,000 acres. Negotiations for three more parcels of land, owned by private persons, including a Washington woman, are continuing. Once those pockets are included in the park, total sea frontage will be 6½ miles.

Design Panel Proposed

Plans to upgrade the architectural standards of all new development in Victoria will be aired by Ald. Mike Young at next week's meeting of city council's planning committee.

Young, chairman of the planning committee, said in an interview Tuesday he hopes to achieve his aims by two means:

- Establishment of a design control panel, consisting of several architects, who would advise city council on the architectural merits of all proposed substantial developments.
- Have developers comply with a clause in the Architectural Professions Act which says that any building over a certain size and value must be designed by a qualified architect.

Young said the proposed design control panel would have no judicial powers, but act in an advisory capacity only. He said he hoped developers would respond in a self-regulatory manner.

Victoria would be the second Greater Victoria municipality to form such an advisory panel. An architectural design panel has been advising Oak Bay council on development proposals and rezoning applications for about two years.

$250,000.00 per year for Victoria/Oak Bay taxpayers . . .

(Referring to School Board administration)

". . . Allan McKinnon pointed out that administration salaries had been something like 78 per cent higher than previous years. 'This in my mind goes down as empire building,' said McKinnon. 'This has gone as far as we . . . can let it go'."

"EMPIRE BUILDING"
". . . one trustee raised a vital question. He called the proliferation of activities empire-building. The protesting trustee, Mr. Allan McKinnon, refers to a reorganization proposal . . . as the straw that broke the camel's back. Earlier, he had challenged other cost-escalating reorganizations . . . The property owners should be interested. It's their money that meets the bills."

3.
(Following Mr. McKinnon's election as Chairman of the School Board)

". . . Mr. McKinnon, then, represents the application of a stronger hand on spending, and a stronger assertion of board member's responsibility for policy making . . . As Chairman he will now have an opportunity to implement his ideas and prove the validity of his earlier criticism. Taxpayers will be particularly interested in the outcome."

"TRIMMING OFF THE FAT"
". . . the consultants point out that reductions . . . have taken place . . . over the past twelve months . . . In all, some 22 positions previously filled are now vacant, with an annual reduction in direct salaries of approximately $250,000.00.
". . . the consultants add that . . . "we have concluded that the present complement of the District Administration, taking into account the staff reduction already made, is appropriate for the functions it must discharge." "

Castaways Win Hockey Match

	P	W	L	T	Pts
Rebels Grey	6	4	1	1	9
Tigers	5	4	1	0	8
Rebels Red	5	1	1	3	5
Fossils	5	2	2	1	5
Castaways	4	1	2	1	3
Vikings	4	0	2	2	2
Orangemen	5	0	3	2	2

Two picture goals by centre-forward Dave Auld earned Castaways a 3-3 draw with Orangemen in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association Sunday.

Orangemen, with goals by Stu Thomson and Bert Meek, led 2-1 after Castaways' Peter Nation opened the scoring.

Then, Auld capped a perfect passing play by the Castaways' forwards to score the tying goal.

Orangemen came back strongly to lead again with Terry Coulter's goal but Auld split the defence with the best individual run of the season to get the 3-3 goal.

Sunday's only other game was also a draw.

At the University of Victoria, Vikings, with a goal by Roland Ek, held Fossils to a 1-1 score. Brian Alguire scored for Fossils.

Huge Hockey Development Program Set

TORONTO (CP) — A joint meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and Hockey Canada here during the weekend endorsed a major hockey development program costing upwards of $500,000.

Gordon Juckes, CAHA secretary-manager, said the plan envisages a variety of training and development aides and materials that will reach "several hundred thousand boys playing hockey in Canada."

Juckes said the initiative for the weekend meeting came from the minor council of the CAHA at its annual meeting and the joint committee of both the CAHA and Hockey Canada agreed at the meeting here on the preparation of the program.

Hockey Canada, he said, would raise the money and provide materials such as films and books and undertake a research program designed by a joint technical committee.

The CAHA, for its part, would get the material to players and coaches in almost every community in the country, using coaching seminars, team and individual teaching methods.

"In effect," he continued, "we are trying to upgrade the training methods of coaches and players based on their individual skills."

Among those attending were T. B. McCormick of Thunder Bay, Ont., chairman of the CAHA's minor council, and Charles Hay of Hockey Canada.

Following the meeting, CAHA members of the development committee met with representatives of Team Canada to review the recent Russia-Canada hockey series.

"We just discussed the series and agreed to meet Nov. 11 and 12 to go into the whole sphere of Canada's participation in international competition," said Juckes.

Team Canada was represented by Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the NHL Players' Association, Al Scott, Douglas Fisher and Hay.

Abofs Out

EDMONTON (CP) — Harry Abofs, Canadian defence back with the Edmonton Eskimos, had his spleen removed in an emergency operation Sunday afternoon.

Tanner Selected Manager of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Chuck Tanner, who molded the Chicago White Sox into pennant contenders, was named 1972 Manager of the Year in the American League, Monday.

The 43-year-old Tanner outpolled Eddie Kasko of Boston Red Sox in a vote of sports writers and broadcasters conducted by The Associated Press. Dick Williams of the world champion Oakland Athletics finished fifth.

Tanner received 213 votes to Kasko's 140 in the poll, which was based on the regular season and voted upon prior to the opening of league playoffs.

Billy Martin of Detroit Tigers was third with 66 votes, followed by Ralph Houk of New York Yankees with 38 and Williams with 24.

Williams was named Manager of the Year for 1971 when Oakland rolled to a 101-60 record. The Athletics were 93-62 this season prior to sweeping the American League playoffs and the world series.

Rebels Red	4	0	4	0	0

Mariners, with three goals by Caroline Penn, downed Pirates, 4-1, Sunday to move to within one point of Division I leader, Oak Bay, in the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association.

Pam Temple scored the other Mariners' goal while Jenny John replied for Pirates.

In the other Division I game, Oriana Weber scored twice and Diane Whittingham once as Sandpipers I downed University of Victoria Valkries, 3-0.

Evergreens and UVic Vagabonds both chalked up huge victories to stay deadlocked at the top of Division II.

In somewhat closer Division II games, Sandpipers II got goals from Nancy Griffith and Leslie Bonsor to beat Sailors, 2-0, and Esquimalt, with two goals by Lee Wallace, downed Castaways, 2-1.

Multi-Nation Track Meet Scheduled in July

It's going to be the biggest track and field happening in B.C. since the 1954 British Empire Games in Vancouver — and it's going to be in Victoria.

President Ron Bowker of Invictus, Victoria's new vigorous track and field organization, confirmed Tuesday night that a multi-nation meet will be held at Centennial Stadium next July.

Tentatively, Saturday, July 7 has been set as the date but Bowker said it will most likely be a two-day meet.

Already five nations are definite starters. The national teams of Australian, New Zealand, Japan, the United States and Canada will be in Toronto the weekend before, competing in the second Pacific Conference Games.

Japan hosted the inaugural Pacific Conference meet in 1969.

All five countries have agreed to send full-strength contingents, limited in the conference to 45 athletes each, to Victoria's meet.

And, said Bowker, there is a vigorous move afoot to get China's national team involved in both the conference games and the meet here.

As well, there will be moves to attract to Victoria teams from countries such as Russia, Mexico and from South America, which may all be added before the next games for Pacific rim nations in 1977.

"We won't know for some time yet, but it could easily turn out to be a 10-nation meet," Bowker said.

Victoria got the nod ahead of Vancouver for the prestige meet because of readily available facilities and a competent group to run it.

Empire Stadium in Vancouver, of course, has its excellent tartan track but no throwing events are allowed there and seating is limited in Minoru Park in Richmond.

Burnaby's Swangard Stadium would have been the ideal choice. But the grounds, being completely remodelled from soccer fields to B.C.'s No. I track and field facility, will not be ready in time. It will be used later in the year for the Canada Summmer Games.

Also, the only group on the Mainland interested in hosting the multi-nation meet approached Bowker, named at the weekend as vice-president of the B.C. Track and Field Association, to run it for them.

With plans to get the meet on national television, Bowker says it will attract a lot of attention and money to Victoria.

"We plan to use the importance of this meet as a lever to get improvements at Centennial Stadium," Bowker said.

The track, which could do with a new surface after five years of pounding, says Bowker, will need to be widened to include eight lanes all the way round, instead of just in the straight. More seats are needed, too.

Dormitaries at the University of Victoria have already been booked and Invictus hopes to cultivate a "mini Olympic Village" atmosphere.

Although a multi-nation affair, it will not be a contest pitting country against country.

"We're going to steer away from this," Bowker said. "People get so hung up on how many medals each country gets — just look at the Olympics — and the meet is ruined. We're not even going to keep a list of points for each country."

Instead, individual performance will be stressed, Bowker said.

This meet is the greatest kind of thing for track and field, he said.

"There is a continuing conflict among athletes, parents and teachers as to which is better, mass participation or a meet for the elite," Bowker said.

"But, when you have, as in a meet like this, the very best of our country competing against the very best of other nations, then you cater to the desires of both sides.

"Both are means to an end," Bowker said, "for mass participation comes from having someone to emulate."

Canadiens Nab Division Lead After Tussle with Islanders

Montreal Canadiens Tuesday acquired the longest National Hockey League unbeaten streak of the season, but it should have come easier than it did.

The talent-laden Montrealers, now atop the East Division, needed three third-period goals to squeeze by the New York Islanders, 4-3.

It was the fifth victory in eight games for Canadiens, who jumped over the idle Detroit Red Wings and Buffalo Sabres, the league's other two unbeaten clubs, to move in front by a point.

One of the two new teams, the last-place Islanders had only 10,875 watching as they went down to their fourth straight setback.

Jacques Lemaire, off to an exceptional start, scored three of the Montreal goals. He opened the scoring early in the first period, then tied it at 2-2 early in the third period and followed with what was to be the winning shot less than five minutes later.

In between, Lemaire set up Yvan Cournoyer to put Canadiens ahead for the second time. Lemaire's splurge gave him 11 points, eight of them goals, and made him the leading scorer on his club.

Islanders got their goals from Billy Harris, Ed Westfall and Germaine Gagnon. Harris, their No. 1 pick in th amateur draft last June, tied it at 1-1 with his fifth goal of the season. Westfall gave Islanders the lead and Gagnon connected midway through the final period with his club two goals down.

While Canadiens were becoming division leaders, Minnesota North Stars and Los Angeles Kings moved up in the West Division, along with Pittsburgh Penguins, who moved into a tie for the lead with a victory in Vancouver.

North Stars, now three points out of the lead and in third place, sneaked past St. Louis Blues, 2-1. Kings routed California Golden Seals, 5-0, and leaped from seventh place to a tie for fourth.

Excellent goaling by Gump Worsley and a lucky rebound were the big factors for the Minnesotans.

Worsley slipped only once — early in the second period when Jack Egers got the puck past him from close in — and became a winner when the puck rebounded and was deflected past Wayne Stephenson off Bob Nevin's skates.

In Los Angeles, Rogatien Vachon needed to make only 18 stops to get his first shutout of the season and lower his goals-against average to 3:00.

Ralph Backstrom, Juha Widing, Bob Berry, Serge Bernier and Butch Goring did the scoring with Backstrom also having two assists and Bernier, Berry and Widing each helping out once on scoring shots.

Berry, who has eight goals and five assists, and Bernier, scored on second-period power plays to produce a 4-0 lead for the third period.

They were the ninth and 10th power-play goals for the Kings, a league high.

Penguins Top Canucks To Earn Tie for Lead

Vancouver Canucks were reminded again Tuesday night that nothing can be taken for granted in the search for NHL respectability.

Only 48 hours after a stimulating comeback victory over the Bruins in Boston, the West Coasters were shut out, 4-0, on home ice by Pittsburgh Penguins.

It was the first defeat in three games at Pacific Coliseum, and it kept the Canucks from moving into a fourth-place tie in the East Division. Victory for Penguins meant a share of the West Division lead.

Loose defensive play and an attack which functioned only in the second period made things easy for the tenacious Penguins.

They cashed in on errors for their first three goals and got a brilliant goal by veteran Ken Schinkel in the third period.

Bryan Hextall and Duane Rupp in the first period and Syl Apps in the second made good on misplays.

Hextall opened the scoring by deflecting a point shot by Dave Burrows after a poor clearing pass made by Jim Hargreaves. Another bad Vancouver pass allowed Rupp to pick off the puck for a scoring shot and Apps scored after Al McDonough had stolen the puck from Dennis Kearns.

Denis Herron, a rookie who played junior hockey in Trois Rivieres last season, was steady in a comparatively easy game to get his second NHL shutout. He was called on to make 23 stops, 13 of them in the second period, as he lowered his goals-against average to 154.

Blades Thrash Weary Bruins

Saskatoon Blades caught New Westminster Bruins flat Tuesday and hammered the west coast club, 13-1, before 2138 delighted fans.

The victory moved Blades into a second-place deadlock with Swift Current Broncos in the Eastern Division of the Western Hockey League.

The loss left Bruins, who were playing their sixth game in seven days, in a fourth-place tie with Vancouver Nats.

Blades' top line of Bob Bourne, Byron Jackson and Bill Laing had a field day, picking up 15 points. Bourne picked up six points on two goals and four assists, Jackson had three goals in his four-point production and Laing scored once and assisted on five other goals. Ralph Klassen, George Pesut, Don McLeod, Garth Dietrick, Ron Ashton Lowell Ostlund and Pat Price completed the scoring for Blades, who outshot Bruins, 52-16.

Emile Demoissac's first-period goal was the only shot which got past Blades' Brian Holderness.

The win by Saskatoon matched a 13-1 decision for Brandon Wheat Kings over visiting Winnipeg Jets on Oct. 14 as the highest score this season.

Off the ice, Victoria Cougars' defenceman Murray Worley is scheduled to undergo exploratory surgery this morning on his knee, which had undergone surgery in the off-season but became infected recently.

Cougar coach Mitch Pechet, however, has not ruled out Worley for Friday's game in Vancouver against the Nats. Another defenceman, Blake Robinson, is also bothered by an injury — a bad hip — but is expected to be ready for the next game.

Cougars are trying to snap a losing streak of three games, the last two against the Nats.

Six Island Rinks in Evergreen

VANCOUVER — Six Vancouver Island skips, four from Victoria and two from Duncan, have had entries accepted for the sixth annual Evergreen Tournament of Champions.

Again scheduled to be held at the Vancouver Curling Club, the event this year offers $5,600 in prizes and will run from Friday, Nov. 3 to Monday, Nov. 6.

Island skips who have received invitations are Keith Dagg, winner of the inaugural event, Gary Leibel, Mo Hill and Gordon Walker of Victoria and Glen Harper and Fred Duncan of Duncan.

Their competition will include the other two winners in a group which includes five Alberta quartets, two from Seattle and 21 from mainland B.C.

Heading the out-of-province entry is Calgary's George Fink, winner in 1970 and 1971. Dr. Bill Mitchell, Hec Gervais and Matt Baldwin of Edmonton and Ken Hamilton of Grande Prairie round out the Alberta contingent. Ed Risling and Ray Guertin are the Seattle skips.

Glen Pierce, a Burnaby curler when he won in 1968 and 1969, will be trying for a third victory with a brand-new rink from the Vancouver CC.

Also from the Greater Vancouver area are rinks entered by Lynn Mason, Bob McCubbin, Jack Tucker, Bernie Sparkes, Sam Cope, Aubrey Neff, and Gene Kraus.

Completing the field of 32 are Kevin Smale, Ted Moffatt, Pete Sherba and Herb Van Grootel of Prince George; Lyall Dagg, former world champion who was recently transferred to Kelowna; Jim Kilburn of Squamish; Jake Block of Abbotsford; Art Winstanley and Buzz McGibney of Trail and Trev Fisher and Keith Heuchert of New Westminster.

All guaranteed three losses before being eliminated, rinks will play through three events with the semi-finalists of "A" event and the finalists of "B" and "C" events qualifying for a sudden-death knockout final. Six draws will be held daily until the last day — at 8 and 11 a.m. and 2, 5, 8 and 11 p.m.

New England Whalers and Winnipeg Jets gained shares of first place Tuesday in the World Hockey Association.

Whalers caught Cleveland in the Eastern Division by edging the Crusaders, 3-2, before 2494 fans in Cleveland.

Jets downed winless Philadelphia Blazers, 5-3, and got a share of the Western Division lead when Alberta Oilers were held to a 3-3 tie by Chicago Cougars in Edmonton.

In the only other game Tuesday, Les Nordiques climbed to within two points of the leaders in the Eastern Division by defeatig Houston Aeros, 5-3, in Quebec.

John French's goal, at 5:27 of overtime, gave Whalers the victory. French slammed in a rebound of a shot by Tim Sheeby, beating goalkeepr Gerry Cheevers for the second time in the game. Tom Webster, with his fifth goal of the season, was the other New England scorer.

Gary Jarrett and Jim Wiste got the Cleveland goals. Al Smith in the Whalers' nets made 45 saves, 17 in the first period.

Jets overcame a 3-2 deficit in the third period with three goals, the last two by Norm Beaudin. Garth Rizzutto, Christian Bordeleau and Wally Boyer were the other scorers for Winnipeg. Derek Sanderson, Dave Herriman and Andre Lacroix got the Blazer goals.

Beaudin's last goal, into an empty net at 19:41, enraged Blazer coach Johnny McKenzie and Sanderson. McKenzie, out with a broken arm, threw towels on the ice, and drew a bench minor and Sanderson was given a misconduct and game misconduct for arguing. A crowd of 4736 was on hand.

Goals by Brian Glenwright and Jan Popiel in the last 10 minutes of the third period gave Chicago the point. Bob Whitlock scored the other Cougar goal and Brian Carlin, with two goals, and Jim Harrison scored for Oilers. A crowd of 2830 watched the Cougars rally in the final period.

Reynald Leclerc and Michel Parizeau scored two goals each to lead Les Nordiques to victory, before 6245 spectators. Bob Guindon was the other Quebec scorer.

Murray Hall, Dunc McCallum and Poul Popeil scored for Aeros.

Decision Delayed In Hull Case

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — A decision on Bobby Hull's court battle with the National Hockey League reserve clause has been delayed another three days.

U.S. District Judge Leon Higginbotham had promosed two weeks ago to hand down a decision to the Hull case by Oct. 24, but the judge's secretary said Tuesday the decision will not be announced before the end of the week.

At stake in the case is Hull's freedom to move to the World Hockey Association's Winnipeg Jets from Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL and Judge Higgingotham is to rule on the validity of that clause.

Hull has not yet played for the Jets and won't until the court makes a ruling.

Flyers got three goals — including one on a penalty shot — in less than five minutes near the end of the third period to down Racquet Club Kings, 6-3, at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Bryan Smelser, Bruce Brekke and Bob Boyd scored for the Kings.

Flyers regained the lead from Juan de Fuca Gulls, who downed Saanich Braves, 5-3, Sunday and then moved to the top Monday night with a 7-4 victory over Esquimalt A and W at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Ed Nichols scored four times for the Gulls in Monday's game and Steve Hansen, Barry McLachlan and Dave Archibald got the other goals, Danny O'Connell and Rick Fisher both scored twice for A. and W.

More than 25 penalties, including four majors and two game misconducts, were handed out in the rough contest.

Bruin Owner Denies Rumors

BOSTON (CP-AP) — Weston Adams, president of Boston Bruins, has denied that Milt Schmidt is leaving as executive director and that the National Hockey League Club is for sale.

A Boston newspaper reported Monday that Schmidt is serving his last year with the Stanley Cup champions. He has been with the Bruins both as a player and in the front office since 1937. The paper quoted him as saying his new job makes him "just a glorified scout."

"The story is completely untrue," Adams said, referring to the report the Bruins were for sale.

Adams also said he talked with Schmidt "and he's very upset by the story."

"He told me he didn't have any other plans outside of the Bruins right now and that he didn't know how the story got started."

The Boston Herald Traveler and Record American reported that Schmidt, a hockey Hall of Fame member who was general manager of the Stanley Cup champions until a month ago, will take a job with another pro hockey team when his contract expires at the end of the current season.

The newspaper also said there were "increasing reports" that the Bruins, now owned by Boston Garden Corp., are for sale to a Canadian syndicate owned by lawyer Alan Eagleson.

In Toronto, Eagleson suggested "some people are trying to make a jigsaw puzzle out of isolated facts."

The NHL Players' Association executive director said he has always thought one of his clients, Bruins defenceman Bobby Orr, "should have a piece of the Boston action," but his relationship to the possible structural change in the Boston organization was "all speculation."

Baseball Pays Tribute to Robinson

He Died with Dream Unfulfilled

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Jackie Robinson, silver-haired and nearly blind, died Tuesday from heart disease and was mourned by the baseball world that grudgingly accepted him 25 years ago.

Although a dazzling all-around athlete, Robinson will be remembered as the man who broke through the major leagues' racial barrier with the old Brooklyn Dodgers.

The 53-year-old Hall of Famer suffered an early-morning attack at his 14-room home in this suburb of New York City. At 4:10 a.m. PDT, he was pronounced dead on arrival at Stamford Hospital.

Robinson's ailments were no secrets. The heart problems felled him briefly in 1968 and diabetes had taken one eye and was stealing the other.

Still, death came as a shock to those who recalled Jackie as a daring baserunner, clutch hitter and the man who opened the big league gates to Negroes.

Roy Campanella, a black catcher who followed Robinson to the Dodgers, sat stunned in his wheelchair when told of Jackie's death. Campy was crippled 14 years ago in an auto accident.

"He was a great man who accomplished so much in his lifetime," said Campanella.

"On and off the field, Jackie could do it all. He had to do it all. What more can I say?"

President Nixon said in Washington: "This nation to which he gave so much in his lifetime will miss Jackie Robinson, but his example will continue to inspire us for years to come."

Ralph Branca, a white pitcher and teammate of Robinson in Brooklyn, said: "Jackie was the greatest competitor. A bright guy. My memories of Jackie blend together and he stands out most as a man."

Robinson was a brilliant football, basketball and track performer at Pasadena Junior College and UCLA. He was given his major league chance by the late Branch Rickey, whose front office genius built the Dodgers into a powerhouse.

In 1947, Jackie, with stern advice from Rickey to harness his feelings and not fight back, broke in with Brooklyn as a first baseman. He played so well he was named National League Rookie of the Year.

Robinson answered taunts and racial slurs from fans and white players with base hits, stolen bases and fielding gems that helped the Dodgers win games.

He played 10 seasons, batting .311 as a five-time all-star and the National League Most Valuable Player in 1949. Six years after his retirement in 1956, Jackie became the first black to be elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Only 10 days before his death, Robinson stood with his family in Cincinnati's jam-packed Riverfront Stadium, to be honored 25 years after his debut in a Dodger uniform.

He told the applauding throng that he wouldn't be happy until the major leagues had their first black manager. He died with the dream unfulfilled.

A year earlier, Jackie Jr., 24, was killed in an auto crash. The son had earlier suffered as a drug addict.

Joining Mrs. Robinson in mourning are son David, 20, and a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Mitchell, 23, of Washington, D.C.

Robinson was born Jan. 31, 1919, in the south Georgia farming town of Cairo. His father deserted the five children and Jackie's mother in 1920, and they moved to Pasadena, Calif.

Although not a scholar, Robinson went to Pasadena Junior College and on to UCLA as a sensational athlete. He averaged 12 yards a carry one season for the Bruin football team and was named all-American. He set a Pacific Coast Conference long jump record and led the league in basketball scoring.

But baseball was to be his lasting game. After playing semi-professional football with Los Angeles Bulldogs in 1941 and serving three years as a cavalry lieutenant in the Second World War, Robinson turned to the diamond.

He played one season with the Kansas City Monarchs in the all-black league before joining the now-defunct Montreal Royals, the Dodgers' International League farm club.

He played the 1946 season at Montreal and then came the call from Rickey, who wanted to discuss his idea of chopping down the color line in the majors. He warned of the verbal battering that would come with such an experiment.

Robinson accepted the challenge and baseball opened a new chapter that now contains such magic names as Willie Mays, Larry Doby, Roberto Clemente, Bob Gibson and Henry Aaron.

He later performed in the outfield, helping Brooklyn win its only World Series in 1965 against New York Yankees. Jackie played on six pennant winners.

Then, in 1956, the Dodgers tried to trade Robinson to the rival Giants. He refused and retired from baseball to become a success in the field of business.

At Hall-of-Fame Induction

First-Game Heroics Started Robinson On Historic Career

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jackie Robinson rarely tried to hide his true feelings.

And anytime he tried, he did a bad job.

Montreal manager Clay Hopper was starting him at shortstop in a game with Jersey City at Roosevelt Stadium. The ballpark was sold out. People stood in the back, in the aisles, everywhere, to see a husky, intense, somewhat pigeon-toed, 27-year-old Cairo, Ga., native become the first black man to break baseball's color line.

Jackie Robinson was trying to hide his excitement, his nervousness, but those emotions betrayed him constantly as the time to begin the ball game approached.

"Nervous?" somebody asked Robinson.

For a moment, he didn't answer. Then he did.

"No," he said. "Well, yes, and no."

Jackie Robinson was plain frightened before that first ball game.

Not of being hit or anything like that, but what gnawed at him was the fear of failure. He also feared for his wife, Rachel, sitting in the stands. He was afraid of the things she'd hear.

Waiting for the ball game to begin, Robinson's mind went back to some of the experiences he had with the Montreal club that spring. They weren't particularly good experiences. But he had overcome them all so far.

Now it was time for his first regular game. This was the real thing, not spring training anymore.

His first time up, he drew a tremendous ovation from the crowd but grounded out. In the field, he was up on his toes with every pitch. He was so over-eager he made an error.

Then the nervousness vanished. A home run with two on will do that for a man. Robinson also had three more hits, stole two bases and upset the Jersey City pitchers so much on the paths that he caused them to balk twice. He was truly the leader in Montreal's 14-1 runaway.

You saw an entirely different Jackie Robinson after the game. He was happy beyond description.

"Elated," was the word he used.

Elated and tremendously surprised by the ovation from the crowd, and the treatment he received from the other players.

"Any abuse at all?" someone asked him.

"Not a bit," he said, and he laughed happily.

I remember Jackie Robinson one day when he wasn't laughing.

That was a day in October of 1951 when he was playing second base for the Brooklyn Dodgers and Bobby Thomson wiped them out of his "miracle" home run.

Thomson trotted around the bases in a half-daze; Eddie Stanky, the Giants' second baseman, had come charging out of the dugout to jump on manager Leo Durocher's back; Willie Mays, who had been kneeling in the on deck circle, couldn't believe what he had just seen; Ralph Branca, who had made the pitch, stood there on the mound, completely numb.

Only Jackie Robinson, the man who never quit, was still playing the game.

While all around him unrestrained joy, abject despair and mass confustion reigned, Robinson calmly remained where he was when the ball was hit, a few feet to the left of second base, and watched like a hawk as Thomson circled the bases.

He wanted to make sure Thomson touched every one of them.

Robinson, to those who didn't know him, frequently seemed an irascible man, and he was to a degree.

Some of those ballplayers he competed against during those early years called him "a professional agitator." Robinson, for all that, was a much softer man than most people believed.

He might say something today, go off half-cocked, sleep on what he had said, realize perhaps he shouldn't have said it, and then tell you he was sorry tomorrow.

"You know how I am," he'd say.

That was one of his favorite sayings.

Jackie lost the sight of one eye not too long ago, but he didn't let that get him down or dampen his sprits.

On the contrary he seemed to be enjoying life even more and when I saw him a week ago Sunday in Cincinnati, being honored before the world series game between the A's and the Reds, he was happy and animated, even to the point of kidding about "old times" with Oakland-manager Dick Williams, one of his teammates with the Dodgers.

To my knowleedge, Robinson never told a newspaperman he had been misquoted, nor did he ever duck a question regardless of how hot the issue.

He gave himself more to causes in recent years than he thought he should, and the one remark he made that will always stick with me had to do with his family.

"I was available to everybody but my own family," he once told me. "I neglected them."

I know Jackie Robinson meant that, but he could never make me believe it.

Team Canada Sure of Win Says Series Scoring Star

NEW YORK (CP) — Three weeks after Moscow, the thing Paul Henderson remembers most vividly about the hockey series between Team Canada and the Soviet national team is the intense, energy-draining emotionalism.

"Even when we were behind going into the last period of the last game, the feeling in the dressing room was that we'd win," he recalled Tuesday at a luncheon.

For his feat of scoring the winning goal in three of Canada's four victories in the eight-game series, Henderson received a trophy as Life Saver of the Month for September. He also receives a home-entertainment console.

The 29-year-old Toronto Maple Leafs left winger told reporters he doubted there would be another series in the same format as the one in September in which National Hockey League stars barely edged the Soviet national team 4-3 in victories with one game tied.

"Everything was done the way the Russians wanted it — the rules, the referees, the playing dates. But we beat them, and next time we should set the rules.

The two-referee system is inadequate, he said, and a lot of holding went unpunished.

"I'm sure if I were to score the winner in Stanley Cup play I would not be more thrilled," he said of his winning goal in the final game.

He expressed regret to Canadian fans for not having been a more gracious winner in a sportsmanship contest, results of which were announced Monday, and said he is glad runner-up Phil Esposito also will get a new car.

Henderson also is in the running for a car from the candy company sponsoring the Life Saver awards. Bert Page, a Toronto-born vice-president of Beechnut, pointed out that goalkeeper Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens won the award in 1971, as an pick from among Montreal winners.

The Toronto forward expressed doubt that the highly disciplined Russian training system would find popularity in Canada.

"The kids will shy away from hockey if you take all the fun out of it," he said.

And the North American professionals "wouldn't put up with such intensive training."

"I don't think the body could take it, when you consider we play a 78-game schedule."

Except for the top-notch Russian Circus, Henderson found little in Russia to enthuse about. He said the Canadians were under constant pressure in a variety of ways and that he was most relieved when he again set foot on Canadian soil.

Canadian Conduct Improper—Bobrov

MOSCOW (UPI) — Vsevolod Bobrov, head coach of the Russian national ice hockey team, said Tuesday his squad would not play the Canadian professionals again as long as the press continued to show "the worst side" of hockey.

In a signed article in Trud, the trade union newspaper, Bobrov said, "The conduct of our rivals in Moscow and also on board the plane from Moscow (I was an unwilling witness) was improper."

The Canadians, who won the eight game home and home September series 4-3-1, tried to intimidate the Russians and "seriously injured" some, "but their psychological attack failed," the coach said.

"We are ready to play with them the real and noble hockey that requires courage but the USSR national is not in the future going to meet players which show the worst side of professional hockey, who do not respect either the rival or the spectator," Bobrov said.

But both sides learned from the series, he said.

"They decided to adopt our program of comprehensive physical training," he said, adding "we also learned something from the Canadians.

"They skate splendidly and rough check very well. It is well to learn from the Canadians their skill to play up to the last second."

Kirkham Races To Big Lead In Cross Country

Claremont and Mt. Douglas may have the top teams but Richard Kirkham of Oak Bay is literally running away with individual honors in the Victoria Senior High School Cross Country League.

Kirkham won his fourth straight race Monday and with a maximum 40 points holds a big lead over Fraser Syme of Mt. Doug and Gordie Evans of Belmont at the league's halfway stage. Syme and Evans have 15 points each.

Running the 4.4-mile course effortlessly in 21 minutes and 26 seconds, Kirkham finished almost two minutes ahead of Evans, who was second, and Mike Long of Mt. Doug, who moved up into fourth place in the standings.

Jill MacLeod of Claremont won the 2.2-mile girls' race Monday in 14 minutes and 47 seconds with Bev Cox of Victoria second and Michelle Brownsey of Claremont third.

It was Miss MacLeod's third win in four races and she tops the league with 30 points. Debbie Reid of Mt. Doug is second with 15 points while two other Mt. Doug girls, Kathy Sapsford and Kathy Bertoia, are next with 14 points each.

Claremont, which took Monday's team race for boys, leads the league with 60 points to 31 each for Mt. Doug and Belmont.

There was a tie between Mt. Doug and Claremont in the girls' team event and Reynolds was third. Mt. Doug leads in the standings with 57½ points over Claremont with 42½.

Knudson Jumps 29 Spots

NEW YORK (AP) — George Knudson took a big jump in professional golf's money-winning list with his victory last weekend in the Kaiser International Open, but it wasn't enough to get him into the top 10.

The Toronto pro, who picked up $30,000 for his three-stroke victory, his first on the pro tour since 1970, moved to 29th from 58th in the money standings as he raised his earnings for the year to $68,571, the PGA Tournament Players Division said Tuesday.

The only change in the top 10 was in the middle, where Grier Jones, fourth in the Kaiser, moved into fourth place in winnings ahead of Jerry Heard.

Player Problems Costly to Velox

Two games played by Saanich Velox have been struck from the Division I standings, the Victoria Rugby Union announced Tuesday.

Velox, promoted to Division I last season after taking the Division II championship two years ago, ran into player shortage problems this season and have again dropped to Division II.

The Union ruled that Oak Bay Wanderers' 20-0 win over Velox and a 22-3 victory over the Saanich club by University of Victoria Norsemen be deleted from the record.

The decision dropped Oak Bay from second place to a three-way tie with Cowichan and UVic Vikings for third and left the Norsemen winless in the basement.

The Union also ruled that a Division I match scheduled for Oct. 14 between Oak Bay and Cowichan but not played because of a Cowichan player shortage, be rescheduled for later in the season and not defaulted.

Camosun College has withdrawn its teams from both Division II and III and Royal Roads, although remaining in Division II, has dropped out of Division III. All matches scheduled against these clubs are cancelled.

Flying Pins Triumph In Weekend Bowlspiel

Ken Roy, Roger Courneyea, Valarie Courneyea and Norm Daisley, the Flying Pins, saved their best until last Sunday to capture top prize in the third annual Gibson's Bowladrome five-pin bowlspiel.

The Flying Pins, with a 216-point edge in handicap over Comebacks, started with 845, improved to 878 and came up with 899 in their final game. The 2877 total, with 255 points handicap, gave them a 16-point victory over their youthful opponents in the "A" final of the two-day, three-event bonspiel.

In the "B" final, Norm Lewis, Vivian Erikson, Bob Bailey and Kim Buckley, the Roadrunners, scored a 100-point win over the Characters of Gold River, 2829-2723, to take the $100 top prize. Pius Scherr, Joe Bridgen, Don Loiselle and John Van Kooten, listed from Port Alberni and called Hangovers, easily defeated Hopefuls of Victoria in the "C" final, 2919-2694, to win $100.

High three-game series for the two days were turned in by Jack Scott with 958 and Elly Charlesworth of Port Alberni with 823. High single games were bowled by Bill Cool with 370 and Gloria McLellan of Nanaimo with 346.

Ad Ban

position voted against the advertising ban repeal and government control by regulation over the labelling and packaging of tobacco products.

Macdonald said during debate that the government would not impose restrictions on the advertising of cigars, pipe smoking and snuff at this stage.

On cigars and pipe smoking he said:

"If the medical evidence is there, advertising restrictions will be applied to those products as fully as we have for cigarettes."

He added that the government wanted hard evidence before it acted.

Earlier, Macdonald had explained that the government was repealing the cigarette advertising ban because it did not work and was unfair.

He said there was nothing to stop publications "from abroad" coming into B.C. with cigarette advertising and this was unfair to local publications which had to obey the law.

And Macdonald said the government recognized "fully that cigarettes kill you by inches," and would bring this message to all people in B.C. particularly the young.

The attorney-general also added that he was "a living and alarming warning of the ravages of panetellas."

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace) said there was a "suspicious quiet" on the part of the news media on bills to abolish liquor and tobacco ad bans.

Leading off the Social Credit opposition to the repeal action, Phillips claimed it would lead to pressure from the government from advertising and the media to re-instate cigarette and liquor advertising.

On the quiet reaction of newspapers to the bills, Phillips said: "Maybe reporters have written about these bills and editors put the axe to it. I don't know."

Phillip also sought a strict definition of what is a cigar.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver Howe Sound) said the proposed legislation would not work because it was negative and only a "half-way" measure."

He favored placing the advantages of non-smoking before the public in government sponsored advertising and coercing citizens to refrain from using tobacco products.

And Williams called for the extension of advertising bans and packaging and labelling controls on "other kinds of substances hazardous to health."

Scott Wallace (PC — Oak Bay) told the Legislature that attacking smoking as a preventive medicine issue was in fact attempting to legislate good health habits, which was a "dangerous step" toward trying to legislate morals.

Wallace said his party supported the controls over the marketing of tobacco while remaining "uneasy" about the fact that it was predicted completely on the government's good intentions with regulations to be drawn up "after we've all gone home."

Macdonald responded that more details of the regulations would be given when the bills reached the committee stages.

Farmers Earn $3.1 Billion

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's roughly 366,000 farmers harvested more than $3.1 billion for their work during the first eight months this year, Statistics Canada reports.

Although the total cash receipts were up 16.4 per cent from an eight-month total last year of about $2.7 billion, there is no figure available for production costs, which generally gobble up about 80 per cent of the total.

Provincial COURT

Inexplicable was the word used Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court by Judge William Ostler to describe the conduct of a 33-year-old Colwood area man who was paroled after serving only 1½ years of a 4½-year term for armed robbery.

The man, Waldon William Pelton, was found guilty by Ostler following a trial on an RCMP charge of indecent assault on a 15-year-old boy last July 30 near the Sooke Potholes, and was sentenced to four months in jail, starting when his present term ends.

Pelton was sentenced in June of 1968 at Vancouver to 4½ years for armed robbery and was paroled Jan. 13, 1970, which Ostler said indicated he had been a model prisoner. Now, the parole has been revoked.

The judge said the indecent assault was not an aggravated case, but it was "inexplicable that a man of this age (and record) would so conduct himself with respect to young boys."

John Dwayne Paul Cindler, 17, of 219 Quebec, was sentenced to a total of five months definite and seven months indeterminate.

Cindler pleaded guilty Oct. 19 to a two-count Saanich charge of theft involving less than $200 — taking a hunting knife, sheath and $7.75 cash from two parked cars early that day.

Tuesday, he pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of breaching a probation order by committing the thefts while on two years' probation imposed last July. Ostler said he would recommend Cindler spend the time in an outdoors detention camp.

David John Petrie, 22, address not known, waived preliminary hearings on three charges and was committed by Ostler to a higher court for three separate trials.

The charges were one of a break-in and theft of items worth about $145 Oct. 9 at the Longhorn Restaurant, 4066 Shelbourne, Saanich; one containing seven counts in Esquimalt of false pretences involving less than $200, and one from Victoria containing two counts of uttering, one of attempted uttering and six of false pretences under $200.

Robert Andrew Ronaldson, 26, of 146 Rendall, received a suspended sentence and a six-month probationary term following his plea of guilty to a charge of possession of a narcotic — a small amount of hashish found when police checked him Sept. 28 in Bastion Square.

Mortaring Around the Blocks

Readers of all ages continue to come and go at Victoria's public library with hardly a glance at busy workers on scaffold high above main entrance. Library stonework is having its mortar repaired, according to library spokesman, because of natural erosion.

Drug Term Five Years

"In this case I must impose a deterrent sentence," Victoria County Court Judge M.L.T. Drake told a 22-year-old Victoria man Tuesday morning. "The rehabilitative aspect is entirely up to you."

He sentenced Terry Alexandra Mullaney, of no fixed address, to five years in prison on a charge of possession of MDA for the purposes of trafficking.

Drake said a probation report showed Mullaney was "an opiate addict . . . and the circumstances indicate that he was selling MDA to support his heroin habit."

Previous "lenient treatment" by the courts, including probation, had not worked in Mullaney's case, the judge said, and it seemed his character was weak. It was to be hoped that "sterner treatment" would have a greater rehabilitative effect.

The public took a strong view against such an offence, he said, "particularly where dangerous drugs are involved," and a sentence to deter others from doing the same sort of thing must be imposed.

Mullaney had pleaded guilty earlier to the charge, which involved about 50 caps of MDA, and was dated June 16 in Esquimalt.

Drug Crackdown

Second Sentence Three Years

Ronald Brian Cunningham, second person to be sentenced in Victoria after the Canada-wide narcotics crackdown Oct. 12, was sent to prison Tuesday for three years by Judge William Ostler in Victoria Provincial Court.

Cunningham, 22, of 3105 Tillicum, pleaded guilty Oct. 9 to a charge of trafficking in marijuana sug.9, when he sold three ounces of marijuana for $30 to an RCMP undercover agent in a washroom of the Churchill Hotel beer parlor on Government.

The young Saanich man had been sentenced Monday in Victoria County Court by Judge M. L. T. Drake to two years definite and four years less two days indefinite for six earlier offences of narcotics possession.

He told Ostler that Drake had declined his request to be sent to a federal prison rather than a provincial jail and renewde t heerqu e,stsa newed the request, saying a prison offered a better chance of learning a trade.

Ostler said the problem of a sentence for Cunningham was difficult because a person of 22 cannot by law be given a definite-indeterminate sentence. He said that "I don't want the slightest suggestion" he was criticizing the County Court judge for giving that type of sentence Monday.

The lower court judge said Drake might not have had definite information on Cunningham's age, or a probation report, or word that Cunningham was a long-time heroin addict, which he admitted to Ostler, or knowledge of the trafficking charge.

He said "all I can do" was impose a definite term starting at once. The three-year result means Cunningham gets a federal prison and the term will apparently run at the same time as the Monday sentence.

The other Victoria sentence for trafficking was six years set for a seller of heroin.

A Message of Importance to the Armed Forces from Robert L. Stanfield

CANADA

Leader of the Opposition

A P.C. government would be committed to the view that each branch of the service should have some unique identity and tradition. And it would take steps to re-institute an old and recently forgotten Canadian tradition: fair treatment of our veterans. Countless veterans, many of them disabled, are living on inadequate pensions. I believe this is a national disgrace. A P.C. government would do something about it, and right away.

The interests of the men and women in our armed forces are being ignored by the Trudeau government. Industrial management techniques have been applied to the administration of the military, reducing the status of the individual to mere inventory. The Trudeau government's "out of sight, out of mind" attitude toward armed forces personnel has been most demoralizing.

Members of our armed forces should not be faced with working conditions inferior to those they would enjoy in civilian life. A Progressive Conservative government would review these conditions and establish procedures for negotiation between forces personnel and the government, on issues that need to be resolved.

If you, as a member of the Canadian Armed Forces, would like to see some things changed after the coming election, I urge you to support with your vote the P.C. candidate in your riding. A Progressive Conservative government is your only real alternative.

Reflected Chimney

Photograph taking advantage of reflection in calm waters of Brentwood Bay shows that even tiny wavelets can turn straight chimney of old power house into something other than what builder originally had in mind. Jack Ralph's camera captured tranquil scene, making giant worm out of chimney.

Older Exhausts Go Unchecked

No immediate action in the area of automobile exhaust pollution control for older cars is planned by the provincial Motor Vehicles Branch, says superintendent Ray Hadfield.

At present, testing stations are concerned only with late-model cars in which these controls are already established — and which the testing stations ensure are operating.

Hadfield says his department is watching closely the work being done in California, and hopes some solution may be available by the end of 1973.

On Monday, Hadfield told a provincial convention of automotive retailers that new testing stations would be built within the next fiscal year in Surrey, Nanaimo and Duncan, with others in the planning stages.

He said it might be necessary to license garage operators as approved testers in some small communities, because mobile testing stations were not efficient and it was planned to require every vehicle operating in British Columbia to be tested.

On the exhaust emission problem, he said it was hoped in the next fiscal year to have devices to identify polluters.

"These are not the same as smokers," he said. "You can see smoke. Our test device will read off the gases emitted by cars."

Monoxide, Burns Death Cause

Carbon monoxide and burns caused the death of a 58-year-old Victoria woman in a fire Oct. 16 and the fire was caused by intoxication, Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Tuesday.

He issued the find after conducting an inquiry into the death of Mrs. Patricia Strickland in her top-floor suite in the three-storey Fernwood Manor apartment building, 1575 Begbie.

The coroner said carbon monoxide and burns caused the woman's death and the fire apparently started in a chesterfield. The alcohol content of her blood was reported as .35 per cent.

Damage to the building was confined to the suite.

Socreds Tweaked

Legislative Reform: Every MLA Is for It

Everyone who spoke in the Legislature Tuesday on the question of legislative reform agreed it was necessary. But Social Credit came in for criticism for delaying the process by 20 years.

Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall, opening the debate on second reading of the bill to authorize Speaker Gordon Dowding to investigate and report what changes are required, said the legislative process must be made more accessible to the public.

He promised all committees involved in the reform process would be representative of parties in the Legislature and said the system now being embarked upon will "alter the whole style, tone and thrust of the behavior in this house."

Hall said the initial work by Dowding and officials appointed by the speaker under authority of the bill before the house is a crucial part of the review of the whole structure of the legislative branch of government.

Pat Jordan (SC — Okanagan North) asked the government for an assurance that positions on the review staff would be filled on a non-political basis. She also suggested former speaker William Murray, defeated Aug. 30 in Prince Rupert, should be involved "because he is one of the most knowledgable people in Canada on parliamentary matters."

Liberal leader David Anderson said his party had no objection to granting of wide powers under which the speaker would operate ("this bill in effect is a blank air ticket to go anywhere in the world to study their legislative assembly") but added, "I trust it will be terminated within the (nominal) four-year life of this Legislature."

"We have no doubt the speaker will use these wide powers wisely, but there is always the possibility of abuse," he said.

Tory house leader Dr. Scott Wallace said this was "perhaps the most exciting bill" of the session, because it promised to modernize the whole political process in B.C.

He noted the Socreds supported legislative reform and argued this was a "complete turnaround" in attitude by the former government, which had done absolutely nothing in this area during the past 20 years.

When James Chabot (SC-Columbia River) called the Oak Bay MLA "Mr. Clean," Wallace fired back amid loud applause from NDP and Liberals: "The concept of this bill states very clearly on the record the reasons why I left the Social Credit party."

Wallace also suggested the study encompass possible enlargement of the legislative chamber (B.C. has 55 MLAs while Alberta, with a smaller population, has 75) and "rat trap" facilities for the press.

Gary Lauk (NDP - Vancouver Centre) said an oral question period should get first priority, followed by full television and radio coverage of proceedings in house and committee, and an expanded Hansard record of debates.

Highways Minister Robert Strachan, who served as opposition leader for 13 years before stepping down in 1969, said the Socred stance on the issue in opposition was one of "sanctimonious humbug."

"I said before I would never be part of government in this house that put the opposition through the wringer that I went through in the last 20 years," Strachan said. "It was 20 years of suffering. To restore the respect of the people for politics and politicians, we must make the parliamentary system work as an alternative to anarchy and chaos."

The house then gave the bill unanimous approval in principle.

Indecent Assault, Man Acquitted

A 21-year-old serviceman was acquitted by a Victoria County Court jury Tuesday on a charge of indecent assault.

A jury of seven men and five women deliberated less than an hour before returning the verdict of not guilty in the case of Thomas Frank Gordon, now of HMCS Cape Breton.

Earlier in the day, Gordon had taken the stand in his own defence, and said he invited the complainant in the case, a 24-year-old woman, to his apartment the night of July 7 for a party.

However, there was no party because his roommate had gone out with other friends, so he and the girl had stayed there alone with only the sleeping roommate, who had since returned, Gordon said.

Everything that had gone on had been with the woman's consent, he told the court.

Under cross-examination by crown counsel Cecil Branson, he said that when the police first came the following morning, he denied that there had been a woman there at all "to save trouble," but soon afterward admitted the woman had been there.

In charging the jury, Judge M. L. T. Drake said that in choosing between the stories of the woman and Gordon, "the quetjon boils down to which of them do you accept?"

Evidence of independent witnesses could be of help to the jury in deciding this question of credibility, he suggested.

Bulwark Going On Spit

A log bulwark is being built on Sidney Spit to stop natural erosion of the sand from the beach, a favorite picnic spot for boaters.

A provincial parks department spokesman said the erosion is caused by the strong currents from Juan de Fuca and Georgia Straits sweeping in close to shore.

He said the barrier of pilings driven into the sand about 20 feet apart will stretch the full length of the spit (about 3,300 feet).

Retaining logs will then be laid along the pilings.

PEKING — Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the Cambodian leader, explained in an interview here Monday how his forces in Cambodia were using dollars supplied by the Chinese to buy medicines and arms from the "enemy."

With the $10 million in "used dollar bills" provided by China this year, "our resistance fighters buy the best Japanese, West German and American medicines," he said.

"When we lack munitions or weapons, we go and buy them from the enemy," the prince said. "For instance, at Neak Luong, a base on the Mekong about 50 kilometers (30 miles) from Phnom Penh, there are Saigon troops who supply us with a lot of things. These people even offer us jeeps. It's very convenient for us."

In addition, the prince said, there were arms traders on the Thai border. "There we can supply ourselves from American traffickers who are very honest both on the quality of the goods and the dates of delivery. We have already dealt with them," he said.

BBC Coup Tale 'Imaginary'

United Press International

The Egyptian newspaper Al Akhbar Tuesday accused the British Broadcasting Corp. of in their attempts to undermine Egypt's domestic front by concocting imaginary stories suggesting instability in the country."

In a front page article, Al Akhbar editor Moussa Sabri cited the BBC reports last Saturday about an abortive coup attempt in Egypt in which 200 to 300 army officers were alleged to have been arrested.

Government sources said earlier this was "a distorted version of a minor incident involving a mentally unbalanced army captain who led three armored cars to a mosque and harangued worshippers with a call for immediate war against Israel.

Al Akhbar's article was the first local disclosure of the mosque incident which took place Thursday, Oct. 12.

Al Akhbar said: "The BBC which always boasts about the accuracy of its reports volunteered a trivial lie about an alleged coup — but it missed the target. The truth is that a mentally disturbed junior officer chose to go to Al Husseini Mosque with three armored cars to pray.

The soldiers manning the cars did not know why he ordered them to go to the mosque. The incident was over in a few minutes."

The Egyptian government Tuesday urged all countries of the world, particularly the major powers, to join in collective efforts to help the United Nations put an end to Israeli occupation of Arab lands. It said failure to take such action would only encourage the "policy of using force."

Instant Newspaper on TV

LONDON (CP) — The BBC announced plans Tuesday for a radical innovation in television service that would enable viewers to select up to 30 different written news reports at the flick of a switch.

A number of commentators describe the plan as the world's first "electronic newspaper."

The BBC said the new system may be in full operation by 1976 with some experimental broadcasts beginning last year. The Guardian said the new development "could become the gravest threat to the newspaper since television became a mass medium."

The patented system is called Ceefax — from "see the facts." Under it, a viewer would buy a small adapter for less than $200 to attach to his regular TV set. This would enable him to choose among about 30 written "pages" of news on various subjects.

The written services would likely cover weather reports, major news summaries, sports, share prices, farming reports, program information and the like.

The unit attached to the TV set also will be able to store information carried during the day so that it can be retrieved even after the transmitter has closed down for the night.

During normal transmission times, every service will be updated continuously.

BBC engineers say it now may be possible for the post office to supply wired connections to the adapter via normal telephone lines.

If this happened, a viewer would be able to telephone a post office number for information on, say, entertainment in London, and have the data flashed on his television screen.

C. B. Wood, head of the BBC's engineering information department, said:

"Ceefax would mean that the farmer could come home from the pub and get a weather forecast on his set at the press of a button; the football fan could come home from a night out and get his own page of results; the investor could choose a page of stock market prices and see whether he could go to bed with a peaceful mind."

The written reports would appear on a regular BBC channel and would not involve the use of cable TV.

Critical acclaim, all well deserved, has greeted the North American concert debut of Australian contralto Lauris Elms.

While it is a thrill to hear Lauris Elms in concert and on the stage, it is also a great pleasure to converse with her, offstage and between rehearsals.

Miss Lauris Elms is really Mrs. de Graaff, a true and considerate lady of charm and personality. Her home town — if one may use that term to describe a city of 2½ million people — is Sydney, New South Wales, where she lives with her husband and daughter, Deborah.

Does Deborah inherit the family love of music which has been so apparent through at least three generations on both sides of her mother's family? Judge for yourself, remembering that Deborah is only 12.

"She's interested in baseball and basketball," says her mother, "as well as anything that can be put together with nails and sewing."

And this catholic taste in activities and pursuits adds up to one ambition for Deborah. She wants to be a veterinarian.

Week of Festivities Marks 90th Birthday

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Dame Sybil Thorndike, crippled by arthritis but still displaying the indomitable humor and gaiety that made her loved in the British theatre, celebrated her 90th birthday Tuesday and embarked on a week of festivities.

The birthday party was thrown by publisher Sir William Collins, who launched a book Tuesday by Dame Sybil's son, John Casson, on his parents' married life. Entitled Lewis and Sybil, it traces 60 years of a remarkable partnership which ended in 1969 when actor-producer Sir Lewis Casson died.

Since his death, Dame Sybil has been plagued with arthritis and has not played a full-length role, although she still makes stage appearances.

Birthday celebrations continue today with a gathering of the Casson clan, and will be capped Sunday with a performance, entitled Sybil and staged at London's Haymarket Theatre, bringing together what The Daily Telegraph describes as "an illustrious company which can ever have been equalled on one stage."

Princess Alexandra will attend.

Among those taking part will be Dame Edith Evans, Dame Peggy Ashcroft, ballerina Dame Margot Fonteyn, Lord Olivier, Sir Ralph Richardson, Sir Alec Guinessess, Paul Scofield and Vanessa Redgrave.

Also in the cast will be Jane Casson, Dame Sybil's granddaughter, who has been working at Stratford, Ont.

The entertainment, sponsored by The Daily Telegraph, is described as a "tribute to a life spent in and for the theatre, and to display some part of the great affection and regard in which Dame Sybil is held by players and public alike."

Proceeds from the performance, already a sellout, are to go, at Dame Sybil's request, to a home for retired actors and actresses.

Lauris Elms Adds Charm to Acclaim

Critical acclaim, all well deserved, has greeted the North American concert debut of Australian contralto Lauris Elms.

And this catholic taste in activities and pursuits adds up to one ambition for Deborah. She wants to be a veterinarian.

Born in Melbourne, Mrs. de Graaff recollects the "very happy feeling" associated with impromptu Sunday afternoon concerts at her grandmother's home.

Lauris Elms
... first visit

These took place a good many years back but "there were both singers and instrumentalists in the family."

She was awarded a scholarship to study music in Paris and subsequently gained wide and valuable experience singing large and small roles during three years with the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden in London. It was there that she met and married her husband, then studying at Oxford University.

In 1958, Lauris Elms made a concert tour of Israel, celebrating the 10th anniversary of its founding.

On Oct. 18 she made a CBC broadcast, accompanied by Victoria's Winifred Scott.

She loves Victoria. An ardent gardener, she was particularly impressed by the Butchart Gardens, but she also enjoyed a tour of Oak Bay and the Uplands.

Shortly she will be returning to Sydney but, next March and under Australian government auspices, she will be making a concert tour of Korea.

Her opinion of modern musical style? "There is excessive use of noise.

"I heard Hair on a record and quite liked it, but on stage it was far too loud. Yet I liked the extempore dancing and that went with the stage version," she said.

And what is her most humorous memory?

It was when she was singing the part of the First Maid in Richard Strauss's Elektra at Covent Garden. She was so carried away by the music that she forgot an entrance

But utter disaster was averted through emergency measures taken by the other four Maids.

Lauris Elms will be heard in recital at 8:30 p.m. today at the McPherson Playhouse. Again accompanied by Winnifred Scott, for whom she has nothing but praise, she offers a program of popular arias, selections from Mozart, Debussy's Proses Lyriques and Berlioz's Summer Nights.

And after that?

Library's Budget Going to Council

Preliminary figures show the 1973 budget for the Greater Victoria Library Board may be up by as much as 28 per cent over 1972.

The finance committee presented to a board meeting Tuesday the preliminary budget figures, which show a budget of $1,202,350 for 1973 as compared to $938,367 for 1972.

But members emphasized that the figures were only rough estimates and could be greatly revised before the budget is finally passed early in 1973.

They agreed to have director of library services Donald Miller submit the figure, and Victoria's share of it, to the Victoria city administration which has requested it, but decided not to pass a formal resolution approving the figures, even as preliminary.

If they did so, suggested Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry, the budget would likely get into the political arena when the figures weren't nearly definite enough to be so discussed.

Legally the board must supply a provison budget to the municipalities which support it by Dec. 15, but it was explained that the Victoria administration liked to have some idea of what the budget might be before that.

Finance committee chairman R. G. Campion said the major areas of increase in the budget were an extra $64,000 for staff salary increases, an extra $60,000 for the hiring of new staff, and an extra $77,000 for the creation of a fourth branch library, somewhere in Saanich.

Other increases would come in the areas of books of which more will be needed to fill the new branch, and also the Oak Bay and Victoria-Saanich branches which opened recently.

Newberry and Victoria Ald. Alf Hood agreed that to submit the figures "cold" to councils could jeopardize the 1973 budget increases because council would see only a large percentage increase with no explanations of the reasons.

At the same meeting the board learned it would likely have a surplus of about $14,650 from its 1972 budget. Of this, $11,000 came from the area of salaries and occurred because some positions were not filled for the first part of the year, the board was told.

The board decided to write the municipal councils and ask permission to spend the money in some way which would probably decrease the 1973 budget.

Members felt the extra should be spent because, for one thing, it would be hard to justify an increase in 1973 if there had been a surplus in 1972.

In other business the board:

- Heard that the library system appears to be heading for a record year in the amount of use of the libraries by the public;
- Agreed Miller should continue looking for premises to rent for the new branch library, probably in northeastern Saanich, which it is hoped will open in April, 1973;
- Agreed the libraries will be closed Christmas, Boxing and New Year's days.

Drug in Hand Nets Remand

NANAIMO — Douglas Kim Anderson, 19, of Nanaimo, Monday pleaded guilty to possession of the drug, MDA and was remanded until Thursday for sentencing. The charge, according to police, arose from information which sent police officers to a downtown hotel where a major drug transaction was in progress.

Mediation Changes: Action Bogs Down

Changes in the Mediation Commission Act bogged down in committee stages Tuesday night as opposition members charged the government had "near police-state powers."

Liberal Pat McGeer said the powers of inspection without warrant given to the labor minister in the legislation could lead to more labor disputes as they were almost police state powers.

Other opposition members, mainly Liberals, also called on the government to drop the inspection powers during debate on an Allan Williams amendment that the minister could, if refused permission, obtain a court order. Williams is Liberal member for West Vancouver-Howe Sound.

Premier Barrett said the powers were in the act under the Social Credit government and no one had questioned them.

There'd been no complaints about abuse of the powers from any quarter, as far as he knew.

Sooke Trustee Objects To Share of Projects

The Sooke part of Sooke school district is not getting its fair share of improvements under the $3,280,353 referendum scheduled for December, referendum committee chairman Ron Fitton told board members Tuesday night.

Less than $500,000 will be spent at Edward Milne high school in Sooke, he said, while the remaining $2.5 million will be spent on schools in the inner area of the rambling school district.

In addition, said Fitton, offering to tender his resignation as committee chairman during a brief, acrimonious debate, he was not being kept informed of what was going on and minor revisions had been made to the proposed list of expenditures without his knowledge.

Fitton said that one half of the school district's assessment lies in the outer area, but he was contradicted by acting board chairman Howard Drummond.

Drummond said the current Sooke assessment is $21 million — down $10 million in the last 10 years — while the assessment in the inner area around Colwood and Langford is $39 million.

"Let's quit bickering about this ruddy assessment," put in trustee Isabelle Reader. "If Sooke industries had to depend upon the people in Sooke to buy their products, they would go broke. They have to come to us and go to other parts of the world to make their money."

Drummond said he has not been up to date on the referendum himself, but he felt that the board had to go ahead with giving approval for the vote.

"We can't go another three years without new buildings," he said. "Our schools are already crammed to the doors."

Fitton suggested that the referendum might be unnecessary in view of the stated view of Education Minister Eileen Dailly that trustees should not have to go to referendum for all construction program money.

He also said he felt that a suggested $29 million hospital construction referendum in the spring could hurt chances of a school referendum passing.

Drummond told him that changes in referendum legislation will not come before spring, and meanwhile it is essential that a vote be held.

Fitton also objected to what he felt were cutbacks in planned expenditures at Edward Milne high school in Sooke from $455,000 to $408,000.

He was told, however, that the additional money had been set aside in case of rising costs and had been transferred later to the contingency fund.

After some explanation, Fitton agreed to keep the chairmanship, provided he is kept informed by the administration.

Alcoholism

Problem Going To Committee

Premier Barrett told the Legislature Tuesday night it is "government policy" to refer the problem of alcoholism in B.C. to the health committee at the spring session.

He was replying to opposition criticism, during the debate on second reading of a bill to repeal the liquor advertising ban, which zeroed in on the fact that the measure wasn't getting at the basic drinking problem.

"The night I supported the advertising ban," the premier said, "I wanted it to work. I really did. But when my own youngsters showed me it was hypocrisy I knew we had got into some kind of jungle that didn't work."

"We make agreat deal of money from the sale of liquor, about $80 million in the past year, and we gave no purposeful commitment to allocate funds to alcoholism research and rehabilitation. That is the fault of the previous government but it doesn't excuse us.

"We are going to ask the community to help us. This isn't a party problem; it is society's problem. I hope we can find some answers."

Barrett's statement followed a proposal by Allan Williams (L-West Vancouver —Howe Sound) that the government produce by the next session some positive proposals to curb" overconsumption and the pushers" of alcohol.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said the "creeping plague" of alcoholism is responsible for staggering costs to society and he conceded that repeal of the ad ban was not going to tackle the basic problem. But he said the government's stand in abolishing the ban was "workable and fair.

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace River) suggested that the government had made a deal with the newspapers to repeal the liquor ad ban and was ordered to withdraw the suggestion by speaker Gordon Dowding after Macdonald objected that the charge was unfair and completely unfounded. Phillips said that SC members would vote against the measure because it was a backwards step."

Hugh Curtis (PG—Saanich) said the repeal of the ad ban was a realistic step because it had never been more than "band-aid legislation." He said the Tories would support the bill and added that as a frequent traveller on B.C. ferries he looked forward to the day when he could go to the newstand and obtain a better choice of reading matter than the "National Enquirer," beautiful B.C. and Capt. Marvel comics."

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said B.C. had the highest number of alcoholics per capita in Canada. He said that liquor companies which spend money on the promotion of sporting events should actually be spending far more on education of the public about the dangers of alcoholism. He added, "If they must sell liquor they must also educate the public about the abuses and problems that follow."

Robert McClelland (SC—Langley) said the repeal of the ad ban could be construed as the first step towards an expansion of liquor advertising in B.C. He said he disagreed with the abolition, adding that it was up to British Columbia to lead all of Canada even if it did occasionally make a mistake.

Politicians across the the same state of apprehe in the old Western movie and mutters "It's too quiet

Does the much-publicized apparent voter apathy mean there will be little change in the Oct. 30 election? Or does it mean Monday will bring a surprise rebellion by voters against one or more parties?

Some, like a Newfoundland Liberal spokesman, say voters are quiet because they are not stirred up over any issue — "they're fat and happy."

Other observers, like Winnipeg Free Press, say voters have been turned off by an election campaign that has been "a transcontinental bore, a coast-to-coast yawn."

Virtually all commentators say the Trudeaumania of 1968 has disappeared.

Perhaps related to this is the feeling of some political organizers that only half of the 2.8 million young people eligible to vote for the first time will actually cast their ballots.

But others like Gordon Sinclair, host of an open-line program on Montreal radio station CJOX, say interest is high.

When he had a Liberal and a Conservative candidate on the program Monday, "I stopped giving the call-in number after 15 minutes of a two-hour show and the phone never stopped ringing."

Following is a selection of observers' assessments in western provinces:

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Candidates generally say interest is low and voting will be down from 1968.

A major reason cited is the recent provincial election, which politicians say drained away voter enthusiasm and party workers' energy.

Several politicians are worried about the apparent apathy.

Robert Thompson, Conservative candidate in Surrey-White Rock, said "If I am defeated it won't be by the NDP or the Liberals. I can only be beaten by a poor turnout of Conservative-minded people on election day — in a word, apathy."

Pre-Election Survey

Silent Voters: Ominous —Or Bored?

Canadian Press

Politicians across the country are in somewhat the same state of apprehension as the veteran scout in the old Western movie who gazes into the night and mutters "It's too quiet."

Does the much-publicized apparent voter apathy mean there will be little change in the Oct. 30 election? Or does it mean Monday will bring a surprise rebellion by voters against one or more parties?

Some, like a Newfoundland Liberal spokesman, say voters are quiet because they are not stirred up over any issue — "they're fat and happy."

Other observers, like Winnipeg Free Press, say voters have been turned off by an election campaign that has been "a transcontinental bore, a coast-to-coast yawn."

Virtually all commentators say the Trudeaumania of 1968 has disappeared.

Perhaps related to this is the feeling of some political organizers that only half of the 2.8 million young people eligible to vote for the first time will actually cast their ballots.

But others like Gordon Sinclair, host of an open-line program on Montreal radio station CJOX, say interest is high.

When he had a Liberal and a Conservative candidate on the program Monday, "I stopped giving the call-in number after 15 minutes of a two-hour show and the phone never stopped ringing."

Following is a selection of observers' assessments in western provinces:

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Candidates generally say interest is low and voting will be down from 1968.

A major reason cited is the recent provincial election, which politicians say drained away voter enthusiasm and party workers' energy.

Several politicians are worried about the apparent apathy.

Robert Thompson, Conservative candidate in Surrey-White Rock, said "If I am defeated it won't be by the NDP or the Liberals. I can only be beaten by a poor turnout of Conservative-minded people on election day — in a word, apathy."

Liberal Ray Perrault, candidate in Burnaby-Seymour, said the campaign is quieter because Liberals seeking re-election have their own records to campaign on and have no need to ride Trudeau's coattails.

ALBERTA

Views on voter apathy vary from riding to riding, apparently in direct relation to how close the contest is expected to be in each.

"People don't seem at all concerned," said Hugh Impey, campaign manager for Conservative Gerald Baldwin in Peace River.

SASKATCHEWAN

Liberal co-ordinator Tom Finucane said people "are being unusually closemouthed."

Some candidates may be feeling false optimism because they are meeting little opposition, he added.

MANITOBA

Winnipeg Alderman Robert Steen, a Conservative campaign manager, said there has been a low level of interest because major parties were campaigning hard before the election was called and afterward had little new to offer voters.

He said interest has been picking up, but predicted voter turnout will be down to 75 per cent this time from 80 per cent in 1968.

Senator 'Lost' Funds

TORONTO — An estimated $150,000 was missing from clients' trust funds held by Senator Harry Wills when the 67-year-old lawyer died last March, the Law Society of Upper Canada reported.

Kenneth Jarvis, secretary of the society, said the shortages were discovered by a lawyer handling the estate about a month after the Progressive Conservative senator died aboard an aircraft en route from Ottawa to Toronto.

Jarvis said the society's investigation indicated that "most of the difficulty arose during the last couple of years of this man's life when he was both ill and confused."

He said five persons have filed claims totalling $85,000 against the society's compensation fund for victims of dishonest lawyers.

TORONTO — Dr. Charles Best, co-discoverer of insulin, told the Toronto Board of Trade that thousands of people die from diabetes yearly because there is not enough insulin to go around. Best, 73, who with Frederick Banting discovered the drug at the University of Toronto in 1921, said more than 136 million people have had insulin treatments. Dr. Best said the shortage is acute in some developing countries in Asia.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, England — The Ria Jean McMurtry, 9,300-ton newsprint carrier, was launched after rough seas subsided. Janet McMurtry, 14-year-old Toronto girl who travelled across the Atlantic to launch the ship, swung the traditional bottle of champagne against the hull but officials decided the seas were too rough and the actual launching was postponed. The ship is named after Janet's mother.

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth and West German President Dr. Gustav Heinemann, cementing the budding Anglo-German friendship, hailed their joint "adventure in partnership" in a new, expanding Europe. Heinemann's visit came amid unprecedented security arrangements following reports of alleged kidnap or assassination plots by Arab guerrillas.

BUENOS AIRES — Former Argentine president Juan Peron will return to his homeland Nov. 17 aboard a chartered airline flight from Madrid, ending 17 years of exile in an attempt to make a political comeback, the Peronist oriented newspaper Cronica said. The newspaper said Peron would bring with him the body of his late wife, Eva, with whom he shared his dictatorship for seven years before she died of cancer in 1952. Peron also will be accompanied by his present wife, Isabel, Cronica said.

MAIDSTONE, England — William John Vassall, a British admiraly civil servant jailed in 1962 for passing secrets to the Soviet Union, left Maidstone prison on parole after serving 10 years of an 18-year sentence.

Show biz note: Barbra Streisand's old pal, Pierre, was in town long enough Tuesday to upstage her. So thoroughly, as a matter of fact, that her popular movie What's Up, Doc? was knocked off the screen at the Royal Theatre for the afternoon.

Political biz note: In its place, a capacity crowd of 1,455 (another 1,400 to 1,500 were reportedly turned away) saw, heard and cheered the man who, several years ago, took Miss Streisand to the opening of the National Art Gallery in Ottawa — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

If Pierre had any thoughts about stealing the show from Miss Streisand, he didn't bother to mention them. He was busy with a show of his own (Federal Election Campaign 1972) and the message — Canada has come of age — won instant rave reviews.

But they came from the overflow crowd, liberally laced with Liberals. The final critique will come Oct. 30 when ballots are counted in the federal election.

Trudeau, aware of this, told his audience people like themselves had the destiny of Canada in their hands. He sought their support for Liberal candidates David Groos in Victoria, Louis Lindholm, Esquimalt-Saanich, and William Matthews, Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

As shows go, political or otherwise, this one had to be termed a success.

Everything fell into place from the size of the crowd that was attracted, to the lack of hecklers and the personal appeal of Trudeau, whose reception was evidence that he hasn't lost all of the spellbinding ability he showed when the Liberals won handily in 1968.

He popped onto the stage at the Royal Tuesday in a light brown double-breasted suit, so neatly pressed that it looked almost unreal. With it was the perfectly-matched shirt, straight tie and long hair in place.

If all this smoothness was offset by any wrinkles in this 30-minute address, no one bothered to point them out.

As speeches go, this one had nothing big to offer in the way of promises — just an attempt to prove Canada has matured as a nation, that Canadians really do care about other Canadians and that the important jobs that have begun during the last four years should be left in the hands of the Liberals.

What seemed to count most with Liberal candidates and party officials was the quiet, easy manner of Trudeau (His lack of attack on any political foe) and the overwhelming reception he received from such large crowds.

Pierre Upstages Ex-Flame With Political Spectacular

But they came from the overflow crowd, liberally laced with Liberals. The final critique will come Oct. 30 when ballots are counted in the federal election.

Trudeau, aware of this, told his audience people like themselves had the destiny of Canada in their hands. He sought their support for Liberal candidates David Groos in Victoria, Louis Lindholm, Esquimalt-Saanich, and William Matthews, Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

As shows go, political or otherwise, this one had to be termed a success.

Everything fell into place from the size of the crowd that was attracted, to the lack of hecklers and the personal appeal of Trudeau, whose reception was evidence that he hasn't lost all of the spellbinding ability he showed when the Liberals won handily in 1968.

He popped onto the stage at the Royal Tuesday in a light brown double-breasted suit, so neatly pressed that it looked almost unreal. With it was the perfectly-matched shirt, straight tie and long hair in place.

If all this smoothness was offset by any wrinkles in this 30-minute address, no one bothered to point them out.

As speeches go, this one had nothing big to offer in the way of promises just an attempt to prove Canada has matured as a nation, that Canadians really do care about other Canadians and that the important jobs that have begun during the last four years should be left in the hands of the Liberals.

What seemed to count most with Liberal candidates and party officials was the quiet, easy manner of Trudeau (His lack of attack on any political foe) and the overwhelming reception he received from such large crowds.

"He seemed almost priest-like," Lindholm said later. As a Liberal candidate, he had been thoroughly caught up in the emotion of the occasion.

People began lining up outside the theatre at 2 p.m., more than two hours before Trudeau was scheduled to arrive. Among the first on the scene were some young people with NDP signs. Later there was a sprinkling of Conservative signs as well.

A theatre official said these signs were taken away by police as those carrying them entered — reportedly to avoid trouble inside. At one time, he said, the lineup stretched up Broughton, along Blanshard and half a block along Courtney.

When the doors were finally closed many outside headed for home, but an estimated 700 remained to listen to Trudeau over a loudspeaker.

This same cheering crowd swarmed around him as he left the theatre — a chore in itself, since it took him 16 minutes of handshaking and exchanged pleasantries to move from the stage to the door.

He had entered the same way, flanked by the local candidates and greeted on stage by B.C. Liberal Leader David Anderson, who used words like "marvelous" and "tremendous" to describe his four years as an MP for Esquimalt-Saanich.

The use of adjectives proved catching. Trudeau chose "delightful" to describe Victoria, then a few moments later to refer to the city's climate and finally the atmosphere.

The scene had been set by a theatre decorated with banners and featuring the big band sound . . . the work on stage of a group of local young people calling themselves simply The Big Band.

Trudeau told his audience that this campaign was different than the last in that it had produced no questions at all of national identity, or whether or not Canada really had become a nation.

Compared to 1968, he said, this led him to one obvious conclusion — that "Canada is here and now . . . Canada is today, not some future hypothetical country."

He said four years ago there was concern about the language problem and that Western Canada was showing more interest in the United States than in Eastern Canada.

But since then — with government programs to help the growth of the nation and the people of various needs — there was a realization, he said, that everyone had "really pulled it all together."

"We're sensing now that we're on the threshhold of three new frontiers," he said. These were the geographical frontier — largest continental shelf in the world and second largest polar land mass — the technological frontier and — "perhaps most exciting" — the social frontier.

In reference to the last, he spoke of programs in such fields as women's rights, fishing limits, problems of the young, the Arctic environment protections, unemployment insurance, minimum wages, difficulties facing families as units and the elderly.

He referred often to working toward "equality of opportunity."

He stayed with his policy of not making promises.

"There's much more to do or we wouldn't be running for re-election," he said. "A lot of real problems are left in our society. No more than in the last election am I going to say if you elect us tomorrow that we're going to solve them right now."

Work would be done on the trouble areas in their order of importance.

It was a quiet election campaign, he said, in which Canadians were giving serious thought to what kind of future they want for their country.

As he left the theatre a little old lady, who said she was moved by the man's words, turned to a reporter and wept.

From the balcony, a young woman shouted: "Good luck on Oct. 30, Pierre."

"Lucky Pierre," someone else said.

And soon "Lucky Pierre" was gone to leave the theatre open again to old friend Barbra Streisand.

He went in one of several shiny big cars laid on for the occasion. At the Inner Harbor, where a seaplane waited to take him to Vancouver, he was greeted by perhaps another 200 people.

There was less time for mainstreeting here.

The crowd cheered and waved signs, and a handful of young people sang O Canada — a couple of them in French — as the Trudeau plane disappeared into the fog.

Victoria Plans $1 Million Shift

Victoria city council will soon be asked to delete about $1 million from the city's $6.3 million capital budget and reallocate the money.

If city council backs the move, the amended budget will be submitted to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer for approval.

The five-year capital works budget in its present form was approved by Victoria ratepayers two years ago.

When Mayor Peter Pollen took office last January, he promised to reshape the capital budget which, he said, accommodated the needs of the automobile at the expense of the community's interests.

The amended capital budget is to reflect Pollen's attitude regarding cars. The $1 million that was to be spent on a number of public works projects, included several street widenings and extensions, is now to be spent on land acquisition for parks and recreational purposes.

"The Marathon Realty property on the Inner Harbor may be one piece of land to be purchased with the money redirected from the present budget.

One item to be scrapped is a proposed fire training centre estimated to cost $220,000.

Council has already decided to defer construction of the tracing centre, but Ald. Mike Young, chairman of the city's planning committee, says that isn't good enough.

"As long as the item is only deferred, council could still change its mind and build the thing tomorrow. We have to delete it, and use the money for other essential projects," Young said in an interview.

Other projects that will probably fall by the wayside will be road widenings and street extensions originally planned to improve the traffic flow in various sections of the city.

Young said city council would still go ahead with the property acquisition necessary for the proposed widening and extension of several roads, but the actual construction work would not be proceeded with in the foreseeable future.

"We would be foolish not to buy the land we will need if we ever decide to go ahead with the projects," he said.

Another major project to be deleted from the budget is "the bump on Blanshard." The cost of realigning Blanshard between Courtney and Hymbolt to reduce the steep grade between Burdett and Collinson was estimated at more than $300,000.

Young said the project may eventually proceed, but not before it has been determined whether Blanshard will become a major access route to downtown Victoria. That would require the extension of Blanshard to the Pat Bay Highway at the other end.

Although there are indications the provincial government may finally go ahead with that extension, there would be no need for quite some time to begin construction at the downtown end of Blanshard, Young said.

Work on the planned extension of Finlayson Road from Blanshard to Shelbourne is also to be scrapped. That project was estimated at more than $500,000.

City council has two alternative ways of dealing with the budget amendment. It could resubmit the changed budget to the ratepayers for approval but that might result in defeat of the entire budget.

The second possibility, provided for in the B.C. Municipal Act, is to resubmit the changes to the minister for approval. Young said he expects no opposition from Lorimer, who has expressed strong support for policies geared to prevent the further intrusion of the automobile into what he calls the "human development of cities."

Strong Support Pledged College

Capital Regional Board chairman Hugh Curtis said Tuesday that he strongly supports the location of the United World Colleges School of the Pacific in the capital region, and he would not want any action taken that might prejudice it.

"I am convinced that ways can be found to satisfy both the shoreline needs of the college and the wider interests of the community," he said.

Curtis was commenting on a recommendation by a regional board committee that Ottawa be asked to lease, rather than sell, a 74-acre parcel of land at Pedder Bay to the school, and that the federal government retain a 200-foot strip of land along the foreshore, which has been defence department property, for public use.

The school's headmaster, Jack Matthews, former headmaster of Lakefield College School near Peterborough, Ont., told the Colonist Monday night that, if the two recommendations are followed, the school will be forced to go elsewhere.

Curtis said Tuesday that he felt the regional board should not act hastily on the matter.

"I was not present at the committee meeting when the matter was first discussed, but I intend to urge the full board to withhold any final action until the matter is fully reviewed with the representatives of the college," he said.

Matthews said Monday night that he would come to Victoria as soon as he could.

Curtis said an informal meeting could be arranged comprising committee chairmen concerned, the chairman of the ad hoc committee of the school and other interested parties.

"I appreciate their problem," he said, "and I don't see any insurmountable difficulty."

The regional board will have a regular meeting Saturday afternoon on Salt Spring Island and will have an opportunity to discuss the situation then, Curtis said.

The school is in the process of acquiring the land at Pedder Bay from the federal government before starting a capital fund-raising campaign. Money for the land was donated anonymously.

Target date for opening of the college is September, 1974.

Polish Victorians Work, Play Hard

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

A hearty meal of cabbage rolls with meat, chicken in delicious sauce, breaded pork cutlets, dumplings, vegetables, salads, potatoes, bread and buns, home-made Polish cakes and pastries, tea or coffee.

Then a 40-minute floor show featuring singer Peter Chipman with his guitar, the Eversfield dancers under the direction of Bebe Eversfield, Victoria choreographer, a polka done in colorful Polish national comstumes, an exhibition dance, and other attractions.

Following the entertainment, a dance to the music of the Skylighters band until 1:30 a.m. with a break for a midnight snack buffet of sauerkraut, sausages and bread.

This is what was enjoyed by the many Victorians who went to the Polorama held by Victoria's Polish community Saturday night.

The Polorama was the third in a series started in May of 1971 by the Victoria Polish Community Association because, says Tad Dabielski, general co-ordinator for the event, "we want to share with our Canadian friends some of our customs, songs, and music, and make it entertaining, not boring."

At each one the music of a different nation has been featured. For example, at the Polorama held this May, Czechoslovakian music was played up. At Saturday's festivities, the emphasis was on Polish and Latin-American music.

All of the Poloramas and other special events in the Polish community are held in the White Eagle Hall at 90 Dock Street. The hall was built almost 20 years ago by the men of the community, who began construction in 1952 and finished in 1954.

With a hall Polish-Canadians had a place where they could meet, hold social functions, speak their own language, "and have a lot of fun," says Dabielski, smiling.

As well as having celebrations there at the traditional religious holidays of Christmas and Easter, they also commemorate two national holidays, May 3 and Nov. 11.

May 3 marks the day when Poland received its first democratic constitution in 1791, and Nov. 11 is the anniversary of Poland's independence in 1918.

On Sundays the community's own priest, Rev. Antony Kwarta, holds a noon mass in Polish at Sacred Heart Church, which the community rents for church services because, says Mrs. Dabielski, "there are not enough people to support our own church, although we would like it."

Altogether there are about 1,000 Polish people in the Greater Victoria area, with approximately 200 of these participating as active members in the community.

The heaviest waves of Polish immigration to Canada came after the First and Second World Wars, when conditions in Poland were bad.

At present, says Dabielski, the rate of immigration has slowed. "If anything, it's a trickle right now." The main reason for this, he believes, is that it is much more difficult at present to obtain visas.

And, his wife points out, "it costs a lot for the people over there, and things are easier in Poland now, so people aren't so desperate to emigrate."

Polish people in Victoria have not tended to settle in any particular job areas, says Dabielski. "You'll find them in almost any field."

And he adds: "Most of them are hard-working people."

The Dabielskis were one of the many Polish families that came to Canada after the Second World War. They left says Dabielski, because "we didn't want to live under communism."

They chose Canada rather than the United States because from what they had learned in school in Poland "it seemed like a wonderful country," explains Mrs. Dabielski.

"The picture they presented of Canada was always very favorable, and we learned quite a bit about it. In Europe children are told a great deal about different countries, and this is how we knew."

The Dabielskis also chose Canada because they felt their cultural traditions would be respected here; that they would be able to keep their customs and language more easily than in the U.S.

"We're all good Canadians, but we try to hold onto our traditions a little bit," explains Dabielski. "We don't go for the melting-pot idea they have in the U.S."

Adds Mrs. Dabielski: "In fact we have been encouraged by officials to keep our culture. By adding our culture we contribute to Canadian culture."

Some of the younger generation are not as enthusiastic as their parents in preserving the cultural traditions, but there are others who are very keen.

Canadians in Victoria really enjoy sharing the customs and traditions of European nations, of attendance at dances and holiday celebrations held by the various ethnic groups in the city is any indication, they say.

"Canadians seem to like to come to our dances," says Mrs. Dabielski. "Even when we're celebrating our national holiday they like to come and watch the dances. It's a kind of sharing."

At many of the dances held at the Da Vinci Centre or the Edelweiss Club often half of those attending are European, the rest Canadian.

Dabielski notes there are more tickets sold to Canadians for the Polorama than to Poles.

They themselves are ardent Canadians, and feel that it is a great country. They don't like to see Canada's resources being sold indiscriminately to Americans and they are against Canadian land being sold to non-citizens.

"If people want the privileges of being Canadians, they should become Canadian citizens," says Mrs. Dabielski firmly.

"It's still a young country, only 100 years old," she says, recalling that Poland celebrated a millenium of Christianity in 1966." Canada hardly has an identity or culture yet."

"Who knows? Perhaps in 100 years, after all the different cultures and nationalities have contributed, it will have its own special Canadian identity."

The Working Girl's Guide to Buying a Reid-Meredith Wig:

Ten beautiful, practical reasons why the wig you buy should be the new Reid-Meredith Coquette: Each 70.00

1. It's only 70.00 yet offers many of the same quality features of Reid-Meredith wigs.
2. It's a naturally color blended wig made to look like your own hair.
3. It will behave better than your own hair.
4. It's one of the lightest wigs you could possibly own.
5. You can easily style it yourself. From a flip to curls to some creation of your own. Or simply wear it straight.
6. You can wear it in a simple style during the work day . . . change it into a glamorous style for after-five.
7. It's easy to care for (just wash it and wear it again), and just as easy to take with you (you can probably fit it into your purse).
8. It's made by Reid-Meredith, makers of the world's finest Modacrylic wigs.
9. Men will love it, even if they know it's a wig.
10. You can now buy the "Coquette" in our Wig Salon, Floor of Fashion.

Reid Meredith's "The Spun Air" Wig keeps a working girl comfortable All day

. . . because it weighs almost nothing thanks to the cap. Full of holes and full of air, so lightweight that when you wear it you can forget it. In a process similar to dropping stitches in crocheting (but a lot more scientific) you get a bantam-weight air-conditioner right there on top of your head. Cool breezes can blow through it, but your hair can't show through. Two styles in "The Spun Air," of Dynel the modacrylic fibre that behaves itself better than your own hair. 16 interesting shades. Helping in Global Village: 'They Taught Me Respect'

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

The warmth and affection of the people in the West Indies. The beautiful designs of Lesotho. The happy exuberance of Bajan children. The friedliness of a Basuto family.

These are some of the memories Pat Lough and Lynne Jones of Victoria brought back with them from their experiences as volunteers for Canadian Crossroads International, a unique exchange program.

They lived and worked overseas, helping people in Africa and the West Indies learn to help themselves, and in the process learned a great deal, too, both about the countries they visited and their own.

That's what Canadian Crossroads International is all about.

Last summer about 70 volunteers, most of them university students or graduates, went to the West Indies, Africa, India, Japan, Hong Kong and the Philippines under the CCI program.

They spent anywhere from three to six months on projects that involved anything from teaching agriculture and working in a health clinic to constructing buildings and repairing laboratory equipment.

The projects were arranged with the countries involved through CCI's head office in London, Ont., which contacted people overseas who had some connection with Canada, either through missions, YMCA organizations, the Canadian University Service Overseas, or just personally.

Cost per student was more than $2,000, and "you have to fork out a little of your own to get there," says Lynn. Room and board were provided by the host countries.

Lynn went to the island of Barbados in the West Indies during the summer of 1971 as a CCI volunteer, and liked it so much that she got a teaching job there and stayed on until August of this year.

Her project was to set up arts and crafts programs at community centres. For this she relied on her experience as park supervisor and swimming instructor at the YM-YWCA in Victoria. She taught youngsters aged two to 16, "from street urchins to upper-middle class kids."

"I liked the people, with a capital P — they were marvelous — very warm and open, affectionate people. I found that they brought out those qualities in me."

She became involved in CCI through a friend who went overseas twice under the program, and "came back spouting the joys of CCI," she says.

Interested, she went to a recruiting meeting at the University of Victoria, and filled out an application form "to see how far I could go with it — and went all the way, to my surprise."

Pat was working at the Nanaimo biological station in "a non-permanent job" when she heard about CCI from returned Crossroaders and decided to volunteer, going overseas in 1971.

She went to Lesotho, a small country in southern Africa, where she worked in a small village, organizing a fabric design project which employed about 10 women.

Purpose of the project was to preserve the traditional Lesotho designs, called rondavels, which the people use on their houses, and to develop a sort of cottage industry based on the silk screening and block printing of these designs on fabric.

"One of the best parts of the project was that I was living with a Basuto family while I was there. I felt as though I was part of the family."

Their experiences taught them quite a bit. Says Lynn: "I found that no matter if you're flung into a corner of the earth 10,000 miles away you're really all the same under the skin.

"The people there have the same fears, hopes and aspirations as I do, and they taught me to be human and how to respect others more than I ever had before."

However, Pat adds, culture does make a difference, especially in the pace of life. Often, too, there is an entirely different way of doing things.

For example, in the village where she stayed the monetary system was based on cows, which can be confusing to a Canadian used to exchanging dollars for goods and services.

Visiting another culture gave them a fresh perspective on Canadian life, too, and not necessarily a good one, says Lynn.

"Canadians seem very apathetic and unconcerned. They aren't even willing to look past their own backyard, and are too involved with creature comforts."

Unawareness of other countries in Canadians is, of course, what Canadian Crossroads International tries to get rid of, says Pat.

"A lot of people in less-known parts of the world want to be recognized. There are many stimulating, very interesting people, and they want to be part of the world and have us know about them. That's the whole idea of Crossroads."

CCI is also designed to teach Canadians as well as the people overseas, and that's good, says Pat.

"In the past grads of CUSO, the U.S. Peace Corps and other organizations have gone with the idea of helping others. I think it's about time we began to learn from them."

For this reason volunteers are chosen with at in mind. CCI doesn't want people who will play the superior role of teacher, but who will take the complementary role of helper.

"One of the most important qualifications for volunteers is to be adaptable and flexible," says Pat, because projects often change in scope as needed.

"It doesn't start out smoothly at all," she explains. "Quite often you end up doing something you weren't sent out to do."

Volunteers are screened and given psychological tests before being accepted. They must have medical examinations to show they're in good health, and must be 19 years of age or over.

CCI's program is always changing and developing new ideas, based as it is on what the volunteers have to say and what they have experienced.

Future plans include sending Africans to Canada, and, says Pat, "this is one of the reasons why we need good financial backing, because these people don't have the financial resources we have."

In the past much of the funds have come from Miles for Millions, but support for this is dwindling, with most funds now coming from private donors, clubs, church groups or service organizations.

Right now CCI is starting a campaign to recruit volunteers and raise money for next summer's projects, starting with two meetings today on the University of Victoria campus, at which CCI board representative Nora Mann will speak.

The first is at 12:30 p.m. in room 106 of the Clearihue building and the second will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Craigdarroch lounge. Both Lynn and Pat will be here to answer questions and show slides.

Women's Job Strongholds Yield

* * * * * * * * *

That's Ernest on Switchboard

NEW YORK (AP) — Proving that women haven't a corner on the liberation movement, men are breaking down sex barriers in jobs usually thought of as woman's work. They are becoming secretaries, telephone operators, nurses and flight attendants.

The biggest breakthroughs are coming in the telephone and airline industries, two major employers of women.

A spokesman for American Telephone and Telegraph said it now has 1,100 male operators among its 165,000 and another 400 men among the 34,500 service representatives, the people who answer questions about bills and arrange service. Five years ago there were virtually no men in these positions.

At Eastern Airlines, a spokesman said the company has received more than 9,000 applications from men since it began running unisex ads in March. Before then, it had about 150 stewards. Now it has 320 stewards and 3,458 stewardesses.

A spokesman for the Airline Stewards and Stewardesses Association in Chicago said the organization was anticipating similar increases in other airlines as a result of a court decision last year which said airlines could not use sex as an occupation qualification in cabin attendant jobs.

In interviews, men in formerly female domains cited a variety of reasons for their job choice. Many said they started part-time while in college and now, in a tight job market, are having trouble getting promoted or finding another job.

Others said the pay was better than in white-collar jobs available to men with less than a college education. Nearly all noted that such jobs as secretaries and telephone operators had been historically held by men.

Except for occasional complaints about being addressed as Miss or being thought of as homosexual, nearly everyone aspects of their jobs. Many interviewed liked most aspects of their jobs. Many said they had learned a lot about human foibles, especially chauvinism. Several said they had discovered a great fringe benefit — the new jobs are a good place to meet women.

Jose Carbone, 23, a service representative at New York Telephone Co. in Manhattan, said he had no idea when he applied for the job two years ago that it was predominantly held by women. He said he thought it sounded like an interesting job then and he still does.

He said the pay, $146.50 to $179.50 a week in Manhattan, is not bad for someone who has finished only two years of college. He enjoys working with the 63 women and six other men in his office and he's gained a sympathy for the woman's plight.

Carbone said that so far he has made it a rule never to date any of the women in the office. But a colleague, Lou Scotto, 22, married a co-worker in June.

Higinio Gino Albelo, 29, a former air force technical sergeant, who is a steward for Eastern Airlines, said he chose the job because he has never got over his fascination with airplanes and likes to travel, though he has no ambition to be a pilot. Eventually he'd like to go into another phase of the airline business.

Albelo, a handsome man who could pass for a pilot in his black uniform with one gold stripe on the cuff, finds opportunities are plentiful. Businessmen give him their cards and ask him to call if he'd like to change jobs. Women invite him to dinner.

in other fields the men are moving slowly but steadily.

Statisticians at the American Nurses Association in Kansas City, Mo., said the total number of male registered nurses has been increasing but they expected only a slight increase in the percentage — less than one per cent of about 909,000 when last counted in 1966.

The same applies to elementary school teachers. In 1961 the 127,171 men who were teaching represented only 14.5 per cent of the total. In 1971, the 176,913 men teachers were 15.5 per cent of the total.

Joe Rodriguez, 22, a secretary placed with a Park Avenue law firm through another agency, said that when he left college after two years, he first took a $96-a-week bank job. When he discovered the job was more proofreading than bank, he decided to take a secretarial job at $155 a week.

Rodriguez, who is in a secretarial pool, said he thinks the men in the office like having him work for them because he's fast — 80 words a minute typing and 110 stenography — and because they don't have to apologize for saying a curse word in his presence.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I buried my husband three days ago. Everyone has been telling me what a wonderful person he was — such a perfect gentleman, so kind and considerate, how lucky I was to have had him for so many years, and how I must now pick up the pieces and carry on without my beautiful helpmate.

What they don't know is that he was a vicious drunk. I spent the last 15 years covering up for him. Just once I'd like to tell somebody what my life was really like. In a word it was HELL. I think I'd feel better. I know this is not normal yet the urge is overwhelming. Now that he is gone and I am free, you'd think I'd want to keep my mouth shut, but I don't. Can you help me? I'm on the—Ragged Edge.

Dear Edge: You've told me. That's enough. If you feel the need to unload, in detail, write again — say anything that crosses your mind. It will be good therapy for you and I won't mind. I've heard everything.

Dear Ann Landers: When I read that letter about the college kid who informed his parents that he wanted a double bed put in his room so he and his girl could sleep together during vacation, I got so mad I almost wigged out. And that idiot mother has to write to Ann Landers yet to ask what she should do!!!

Two of our friends have college-age kids who pulled the same stunt and got away with it. (One is a girl!) The mother of this so-called liberated female said they had no choice. The girl announced that if they didn't say it was okay for her and the fellow to sleep in her room they would pitch a tent on the front lawn and sleep there so all the neighbors could see.

Another mother who was mouse-trapped into a similar situation told my husband and me that she was raised by a strict Methodist minister father and an out-of-this world prudish mother and that she was glad her children were honest and open about sex and that she was all for it.

What will these kids be like 10 years from now? Will they be better off or worse off than we were? Can you tell us?—Mind Boggled.

Dear Boggled: No — and neither can anyone else. Extreme rigidity is as damaging to children as permisiveness. The most difficult part of parenthood is to find the middle ground. If parents can't decide whether to say yes or no, my advice is to say "NO." I firmly believe that less damage is done by being too strict than too permissive. Besides, kids don't always want everything they ask for.

Quebec Tenants Raising Roof

MONTREAL (CP) — Landlords who charge exorbitant rents or indiscriminately evict tenants should pay fines of $500 and up, says the Quebec Federation of Tenants Associations. The federation has also asked a committee of the Quebec legislature to allow prospective tenants five days after signing in which to cancel a lease.

When the Stratsraad Lehmkuhl, Norwegian three-master bark, sets sail for its third year as a school in November, some 70 students will be aboard.

The Oceanies schoolship will cruise 14,000 miles during the eight-month term — to Europe, Africa and South America.

The floating-school idea took shape when Charles and Stephanie Gallagher, father and stepmother of three — now aged 12, 14 and 15 — tried but failed to fill a void for the youngsters who were thoroughly bored with education. They first sought to stimulate the urge to learn by providing expensive outside activities: opportunities for tennis, theatre and Rock music.

Scrubbing ship's deck part of education curriculum

The floating-school idea took shape when Charles and Stephanie Gallagher, father and stepmother of three — now aged 12, 14 and 15 — tried but failed to fill a void for the youngsters who were thoroughly bored with education. They first sought to stimulate the urge to learn by providing expensive outside activities: opportunities for tennis, theatre and Rock music.

It was no good.

Then the father, a producer of educational films, remembered his college experience on a schooner and its educational value.

"There is no environment like the sea to clear your mind," he said in a recent interview. "You meet nature in depth. The human spirit gets tested in the cycle of days and weeks. You find yourself at a demanding job, covered with oil and grease, meeting the challenges of sun, fog, storm."

Gallagher decided a shipboard experience might be just the thing for his three bored-with-education youngsters. He leased the Stratsraad Lehmkuhl, which had been used for training by the Norwegian merchant marine, and invited a number of teen-agers who were disenchanted with school to accompany the family.

Thus Oceanics began, with Mrs. Gallagher as co-founder. That was two years ago.

A statement from the school's headquarters at 145 East 74th Street, New York, N.Y. 10021, says that on shipboard "a new set of values" emerges. Character building and a sense of responsibility are said to result. Further:

"The Oceanics proposes that the young people be 'kicked out' of the comfortable, numbing environments and into the real world with its natural highs and natural lows and natural in-betweens."

Mrs. Gallagher commented that "exposed to world history first-hand, living under the musts of ship discipline, seeing the United States in perspective, these same students are no longer bored."

"I loved it," Jeff Farmer, 19-year-old student from Edina, Minn., told me. "It's the most profitable year of my life."

What was the best part of it? The youth, who wears his hair medium long but manages to look peaceful rather than the protesting type, quickly replied:

"Mexico. I found people I really got to know and like. I got rid of some stereotypes."

Courses offered fit in with the shore and ship living. Math stresses trigonometry, while geography and astronomy are involved in celestial navigation and piloting. Marine biology, oceanography, ecology, world history, current affairs also are taught.

Students' activity aboard ship is not confined to books and lectures. They spend a minimum of eight hours a day on watch — in the rigging, on deck, in the galley, or in the engine room. On completing the year, they qualify as able seamen.

"The excitement and adventure offset the hard work for students," Mrs. Gallagher explained, especially in foreign ports and on field trips.

Mismanagement 'Prime Issue'

ROAD TO OTTAWA 72

Allan McKinnon, Progressive Conservative candidate for Victoria, said Tuesday that the main issues in the federal election campaign should be mismanagement of the economy; rising taxes; callous treatment of the elderly and downgrading of Parliament.

In a press release, McKinnon said his party has a 15-point program to cut down unemployment with the main points being: "a reduction in personal income tax of 4 per cent plus non-imposition of the 3-per-cent increase planned by the government on Jan. 1; provide direct incentives to assist employers to expand the work force; eliminate the 11-per-cent tax on building materials and develop an active job-hunting capacity in the manpower and immigration department."

Roger Smith, NDP candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, said in a press release Tuesday that Canadians had reason to be concerned "at the way in which Canadian studies are taught in primary schools and secondary schools."

Smith's statement said the "the 1968 Hodgett report, What Culture? What Heritage? showed that Canadian youth gains at best a limited appreciation of Canada and what Canada means and stands for.

"We will never have a truly unified Canada unless children are educated to think more widely than in terms of the narrow needs and aspirations of regions or of single ethnic groups."

Dan Heffernan, Progressive Independent candidate for Victoria, said in a press release Tuesday that "the only way to get an MP who will really represent Victoria residents is by voting for an independent candidate.

"The party system is outdated and by voting for a party member you will be getting the same kind of neglect Victoria has had the last nine years."

The statement added that there "are a lot of problems in Canada, and one of the major ones is the party system."

Donald Munro, Progressive Conservative candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, pledged his support for establishment of an Opportunities for Youth directorate responsible to the Commons through a minister, and also for a special youth employment section in the manpower and immigration department, in a press release Tuesday.

He charged the current Opportunities for Youth program was "an excellent example of a potentially good idea mutilated by the Liberal misgovernment," noting that some good local projects were refused OFY funding while a marijuana farm and a homosexual club had been given OFY money elsewhere.

Mike Hall-Patch, Independent candidate for Victoria, said in a press release Tuesday regarding U.S. domination, "Mexicans can avoid it. Arabs can avoid it. Canada can avoid it, too, but it takes guts. The same kind of guts the Icelanders show in refusing to allow larger nations to fish in areas which they have declared to be their territorial waters."

His statement added that "all foreign executives working in Canada for Canadian subsidiaries of foreign firms, should be taxed at a specially high rate."

Flemming Hansen, NDP candidate for Victoria, said in a press release Tuesday that unemployment in the Victoria area "could be sharply curtailed if the federal government would establish a merchant marine.

"The New Democratic Party has been advocating a merchant marine for many years. With the present unemployment crisis, it is now an opportune time to start this valuable project.

"A merchant marine would be especially welcome in Victoria. It is the type of non-polluting, job-intensive industry which is desirable for this beautiful coastal city, which must not be allowed to suffer industrial pollution."

Hansen added that the "Liberal and Conservative governments have rejected his proposal as uneconomical.

"But what could be more uneconomical than the government's present policy of giveaway to wealthy, foreign-owned, polluting corporations? Subsidies to these corporations have failed to create enough jobs, despite the millions of dollars they have taken from public tax money. A merchant marine would benefit Canada by producing jobs for Canadians, and it would be a national project of which we could all be proud."

John Tisdalle, Social Credit candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Tuesday that it is "far better to practise defensive health than acute care."

In a press release, Tisdalle said that "never in the history of a food-short world has there existed a more urgent need to extend our energies and direct our forces to produce better nutritional farm products. Everyone can't grow their own food requirements and our research is woefully behind in advancing research for improving nutritional values in food products. The emphasis has been placed on quantities with a correspondent neglect to nutritional qualities."

Second Inmate Caught

Two of the three inmates who escaped Sept. 17 from the William Head minimum-security institution in Metchosin have been recaptured.

Second of the trio to be picked up by police was William Donald Valouche, 37, who was arrested Tuesday by Vancouver police on a charge of possesssion of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking.

Colwood RCMP said a charge in connection with the escape might be waived to Vancouver for hearing there.

Valouche was sentenced Oct. 25, 1967, in Burnaby, to 10 years for possession of narcotics and known stolen property.

At the time of the escape, he and the other inmates to leave — David Jack O'Brien, 28, and Neil Thompson, 24 — were described by officials as drug users who were close companions and recent arrivals at William Head from the Fraser Valley detention centre.

Thompson remains at large.

'Stricter System Needed'

The apparent shooting of a rare white egret by hunters in the Cowichan Bay area earlier this month has been condemned by J. B. Tatum, Victoria Natural History Society president.

Tatum said Monday the shooting of the bird, a Common Egret, which normally lives in the southern United States, points to the need for a stricter system of issuing hunting licences and for a compulsory course for hunters to take before being granted permits.

Shooting of the bird was prohibited by the federal Migratory Birds Convention Act which provides for a fine of up to $300 and-or a jail term of up to six months.

A birdwatcher saw a hunter fire into a dike where the egret had been seen and was later seen carrying away a long-necked white bird which was "undoubtedly the egret," Tatum said. The hunter has not been identified or caught.

Health Advice
Few Takers

The registrar of the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons says he is in complete agreement with pleas that the public become more aware of physical fitness, but it appears people seldom take such advice.

But Dr. William McClure said Tuesday that the public's apparent rejection of the warnings indicates there is a limit to what might be accomplished.

"The public is obviously ignoring the advice," he added. "The evidence is in the epidemic of lung cancer, which has been linked to smoking, and obesity."

McClure said politicians such as Prime Minister Trudeau and B.C. Health Minister Dennis Cocke had suggested that public education in physical fitness would reduce the costs of medicare.

"I certainly agree," stated McClure, "but it remains primarily the responsibility of the individual."

Advance Vote Lighter

Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich federal constituencies were within one vote of each other in advance polls held Saturday and Monday.

In Esquimalt-Saanich, 803 voters turned out to cast their ballots for the Oct. 30 election, and in Victoria there were 804.

Figures given by returning offices for 1968 were 1,100 in Victoria and 1,062 in Esquimalt-Saanich.

One Victoria federal election official said advance voting might have been lighter this year and in 1965 because it occurred when people were more likely to be at home on voting day.

The 1968 election was held in the summer and voters leaving on vacation would have cast their ballots before they went.

Right. They are.

Squash It

Leaning back in his Madison Avenue officer chair, his tie draped around his shoulders, and his vigorous black hair trying to defy his comb and fly off in all directions, Kaufman said, "It's nothing but the rejected skin of the old building that we squashed, and instead of sending it back to the factory we set it up there."

Why?

Well, like the trees, the stream, the pantsuited girls, and the blue elevators, it's part of a philosophy of life, particularly life if New York City. It's a revolt against pomposity, sterility, unfriendliness, and monolithic oppressiveness.

"What the architect has done in the last 20 to 30 years," Kaufman said, "is, he's taken away our opportunity to identify with structures. They are all the same."

Very Sterile

It's not just Water Street or the Wall Street area. Kaufman includes the whole city. He even describes some of his own earlier buildings as "very handsome, and very sterile."

"The thing that makes the new spaces bad is that you stand out there and you're exposed, and if there's anything you don't want to see it's more of those things, those big buildings. You keep feeling smaller and smaller and this is a rotten experience."

One of Kaufman's major objectives is to destroy some of the architectural aspects of his buildings. Referring to his latest completed building at 127 John Street, which has created something of a controversy, he said: "The building disappears; you have no sense of the actual structure."

"Why do you want it to disappear?"

Scale Wrong

"Because a skyscraper's scale is wrong for a human being to relate to: you can't cope with it; it's oppressive. It's doubly oppressive because of the nature of the architecture and the style of construction that's been developed, which is totally inhuman — the metal panels and glass walls.

"There's no handiwork, there's no decoration, there's no interchange between the guy across the street and us.

"The only thing you can try to do is regain human elements in some areas so that when a person walks through he relates to those areas. He does not relate to the total structure."

Eye Level

When you approach John Street your eye is not forced to travel up its majestic 32 stories. Bright awnings, colored chairs (love seats) for anyone to use, sculptured telephone booths, a 50-foot neon digital clock, humorous sculpture, a pool, and a fountain interlock around the building and keep the gaze at eye level.

As with 77 Water Street, you are not sure where tthe sidewalk ends and the building begins. And should you go inside (and you are welcome too) you'll find a few surprises. There's a corrugated steel tunnel, lighted by bluish neon lights, leading to the elevators, some of which are a glowing red and others blue. They create the illusion that instead of riding in a steel cage you are rising in a cloud of color.

Kaufman called it a "vitalizing experience," and, certainly, it wakes you up.

All Wrong?

"We've presented an alternative," said Kaufman. "It may be all wrong from the point of view of being art or architecture; but one thing we know — it's stimulating, and people enjoy it."

Kaufman is concerned not only with those who use his buildings or see them from the ground, but with, as he says, the "guys across the way" in the other skyscraper. For their enjoyment, 77 Water Street has on its roof a giant iron sculpture of a First World War Sopwith Camel with Astro-Turf runway and landing lights.

At 127 John Street, the water tanks are brightly colored, and the machine room for the plumbing, central heating, and air-conditioning is a pattern of colors — greens, blues, reds, etc. It is a 15 h floor, enclosed by glass, and is a flamboyant sight.

At night it is lighted with stars and sequential lights, and can be seen from the Eastside Highway.

Course Cuts Speed Up French Study

OTTAWA (CP)—In what appears to be a move to churn out more bilingual public servants, the federal government is chopping nine weeks from its language school programs.

The reduction of the 36-week courses to 27 weeks is almost complete, a treasury board spokesman said Tuesday.

Last week, the Montreal paper Le Devoir published the findings of a 16-volume government report on bilingualism in the public service which said the government's 1975 goal would not be reached without drastic changes in present programs.

The report said the government's second-language courses, which cost about $54 million from 1966 to 1971, have only brought about eight per cent of the 22,807 public servants enrolled to the level of bilingualism.

It also said 92 per cent of the students enrolled in either French or English courses failed to complete their studies.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said, shortly after the documents were leaked, that the study was based on out-of-date information and gave a misleading impression.

He said the papers were merely a background for a larger report on bilingualism and were mostly based on 1970 statistics. He said it did not take into account "the considerable progress" made in the last two years.

Seeding Charge Ridiculed

QUEBEC (CP) — Charges that cloud-seeding operations are responsible for unusually heavy rainfall in Quebec are "ridiculous and without scientific basis," Gilles Masse, Quebec natural resources minister, said Tuesday.

No such operations have been carried out in the province since Aug., 1964, he said.

Bernard Dumont, Creditiste member of the Quebec national assembly for Megantic, said last month that Canadian Armed Forces jets flying at altitudes of 25,000 feet regularly seed clouds with silver iodide to provoke rain.

Cable Test Case Challenges CRTC

OTTAWA (CP) — A court action challenging the authority of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to license cable television companies has been launched in the Federal Court of Canada.

It is regarded as a test case which could have widespread repercussions in the cable TV industry.

Launched by Teleprompter Cable Communications Corp. of New York, it is the first suit initiated by a cable system against the commission.

The commission obtained authority for regulating cable under the Broadcasting Act in 1968. The jurisdiction issue has been argued before in lower-court actions initiated by the CRTC against cable operators.

Teleprompter alleges that the CRTC sent a letter, dated July 20, ordering the company's Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., system to close down because it had been operating without a licence since April, 1968.

Teleprompter says the system receives television signals from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and distributes them to its subscribers along with programs originated in its own studio.

The cable company argues that it is a closed-circuit operation not involved in radio communication under the Broadcasting Act.

The company asks for Federal Court to declare that it isn't a broadcasting undertaking and isn't required to obtain a CRTC licence.

It also seeks an injunction restraining the commission from taking action against it.

The CRTC is appealing a ruling by Federal Court Judge Louis Pratte allowing Teleprompter to go ahead with the suit, on the grounds that the CRTC is not an entity that can be sued.

No date has been set for hearing the appeal.

Ottawa Eyes Canadian Role In Vietnam

OTTAWA (CP) — Officials foresaw the possibility Tuesday that Canadian military personnel soon will be taking on a new peacekeeping role in Vietnam.

Informed sources made clear, however, that the Canadian government had not been officially informed by any of the parties involved of a pending breakthrough in the present peace negotiations.

There has been widespread speculation recently that the United States and North Vietnam are close to an agreement on ending the war, and that the U.S. now is trying to persuade its South Vietnamese allies to accept the terms.

Many observers assume that if a ceasefire is worked out, an international truce team will be designated to keep watch over it.

Canada, with Poland and India, already is involved in a Vietnam truce supervisory role. The three countries make up the Internatonal Control Commission for Indochina established under the 1954 Geneva accords.

Though the commissions have been powerless to prevent the rampaging hostilities that followed large-scale U.S. intervention in the mid-1960s, they still are in existence at reduced strength.

American officials have often said they envisaged some kind of supervisory arrangement to cover a ceasefire, and that the Vietnam control commission might be used as the nucleus.

Others contend that an entirely new organization might have to be formed.

Suggestions have been advanced that if an expanded Vietnam truce control operation is mounted, it should be an all-Asian effort. However, if history is any guide, Canada will no doubt be asked to play a role. Canada has been involved in every international peacekeeping operation to date.

The Canadian government, disenchanted by the ineptitude of the Indochina commissions has said that it will closely examine the terms of reference before agreeing to take on any future such assignments.

But Ottawa officials concede that it would be difficult for Canada to say no to a request if it appeared that by refusing Canada would scupper chances for an end to the bloody war.

A contingency plan for moving Canadin peacekeeping troops into Vietnam has been on file in the defence department for several years. Former defence minister Leo Cadieux once said 6,000 Canadian troops might be required for the job, in addition to contributions from other countires.

Seniors Stuck In U.K.

LONDON (CP) — Nine Vancouver residents, all of them old-age pensioners, are stranded here because they have not received the return portion of their charter airline tickets from their booking agent, adventurers Travelaide Ltd. in Vancouver. In Vancouver, the head of Adventurers Travelaide, George Hartwig, said the original Dan-Air flight from London, which was to have brought the pensioners home Oct. 20, was cancelled.

He said he has arranged transportation for the nine tourists on flights leaving London Oct. 27 and Nov. 10. His company would assume responsibility for the pensioners' living expenses until they leave.

Korean Demand: Tone It Down

SEOUL (UPI) — North Korea demanded Tuesday that South Korea tone down its anti-communist posture in order to assure success for the south-north Red Cross talks seeking to help divided families communicate and reunite.

At th same time, it proposed that South and North Korea station Red Cross missions in each other's territory.

Eroding Rights

Indian Women Combatting Act

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Bill of Rights is being used to erode treaty rights granted to natives under the Indian Act, Helen Gladue of the Winterburn Reserve said Tuesday.

Mrs. Gladue, president of the 12-member committee of Treaty Women of Alberta, said the committee was formed Saturday at Hobbema, Alta., to protect rights of Indian women under the Indian Act.

Mrs. Gladue and Vicki Crowchild of Edmonton, a resource person working with the committee, said it was necessary to keep women informed that the bill of rights is taking precedence over the Indian Act.

"That's bad, because it destroys the act that concerns our treaties," said Miss Crowchild, a University of Alberta student.

The committee concerned itself primarily with a 1967 liquor case involving Joe Drybones in the Northwest Territories and Jeannette Lavell, an Ojibway woman of Toronto, who married a non-Indian last year.

The Supremem Court of Canada ruled last year that Mrs. Lavell had forfeited her treaty status by marrying the non-Indian.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank the many people and friends whom our dear departed brother and uncle, Bill Hansen, worked for as we were often told of the many kindnesses you all bestowed upon him. Special thanks to Mrs. Frances Reilly and Family and Rev. Faris for his consoling words. It's True, (This is Billy's Spring)—Mr. and Mrs. Steve Mancewich and family, Jack Hansen, David Hansen, Josie Nuefeld, Mr. and Mrs. George (Steve) Hanisch, Mr. and Mrs. Cruce Carlos, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hansen.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HOLDING—In memory of Victor R. Holding who died October 25, 1970.
They say that time will ease the pain and help us to forget
But time so far has only shown how much we miss you yet.
We miss your smile, your voice, your talk;
the things we used to do.
We miss the happy times we had mostly we miss you.
—Remembered by Agnes, Monty, Vickie and Tony.

IRISH—In ever loving memory of our mother, Dorothy E. A. Irish, who passed away Oct. 25, 1969; our dad, William Sanford Irish, April 19, 1948; our aunt, Ruth Jessie Hyde, Nov. 19, 1969. Always remembered.—Mae Pettersen, Agnes Long.

PRICE—Charlie: In loving memory of our father, Charlie, who passed away October 25, 1958.
His smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall,
He had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day we know not when
To clasp his hand in a better land
Never part again.

HOW TO WRITE
A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc, for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to specu-

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday

Canadians To Skate In Russia

OTTAWA (CP) — Three Canadians will compete in the Moscow figure skating competition Dec. 9-13, the Canadian Figure Skating Association announced Tuesday.

The association said it will be the first time Canadian skaters have competed in the Soviet Union.

They will be Cathy Lee Irwin, 21, of Toronto; Marion Murray, 18, of Vancouver and Glenn Moore, 18, of Salmon Arm, B.C.

Oilers Make Two Trades

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers traded linebacker George Webster late Tuesday to Pittsburgh Steelers for wide receiver Dave Smith.

It was the second trade of the day announced by the Oilers.

Earlier, the National Football League team said it had traded linebacker Ron Pritchard and wide receiver Charley Joiner to Cincinnati Bengals for running backs Fred Willis and Paul Robinson.

Nitinat Rush Carries On

By KLAUS MUENTER
Colonist Correspondent

COWICHAN BAY — The big fishing operation at Nitinat Lake that began Sunday has been extended until further notice by federal fisheries officials. Originally it was to have ended today.

The commerical fishing by 80 seiners and 95 gillnetters was allowed to re-establish a biological balance and reduce fish overpopulation in the tidal lake at the west coast of Vancouver Island. One of the fishing companies involved, Canadian Fishing Company, made history by using trucks to take the catches from the lake to Cowichan Bay from where they are shipped by packers to the company's cannery in Vancouver Harbor.

Tough Gap

Some of the other companies involved are B.C. Packers, Queen Charlotte Fisheries and Francis Millerd. The other companies take the fish through the "gap" that connects the lake with the Pacific Ocean. According to old time fishermen "the gap" is difficult to navigate because of strong currents and a sandbank. One of the retired fishermen who watched the loading operation at Cowichan Bay from large dump trucks to the packer, said the gap has claimed many lives and boaats during the past 60 years.

Good Factors

The same company has two more packers, Cape Scott and Canfisco. O'Connor said the trucking of the fish has been very successful. One return trip to Nitnat Lzke is about 140 miles. There are about 18 trucks and drivers and fishermen are working around the clock. From visual observations fisheries officers estimated between one half to three quarter millions of fish in Nitinat Lake before the big fishing operation began.

O'Connor said big fishing operations like the one at Nitinat occasionally occur and he referred to similiar situations like the Admas River sockeye run in 1950 and the Bella Coola pink salmon run in 1962.

Good spawning conditions and allow mortality rate on the high sea are factors for exceptionally good fishing. The last commercial fishing at Nitinat Lake took place 11 years ago. Notices that commercial fishing would take place at Nitinat were posted publicaly Oct. 13.

Fish averaging 8.4 pounds made some nets so heavy that there was difficulty in lifting them into the boats.

"I've never seen anything like it in my life, seiner skipper Denver Secord said.

"They are lying in schools off the Nitinat bar for miles at sea. What a way to end up the fishing season! What a Christmas present this will be for the boys."

The 12-mile-long lake had not been opened to commercial fishboats since 1961. Observers watching the fish pile up thought the total catch might reach a million salmon.

Ban Imposed

Catches of a million fish were not uncommon here many years ago, but post-war takes were so poor that a total fishing ban was imposed.

Eldon Smith of Vancouver, owner-skipper of a gillnetter, had a take of 824 fish in 15 hours. Monday morning he delivered 8,238 pounds of fish to the packer at 17 cents a pound.

He said he and a helper would take turns getting a little sleep while fishing day and night through the opening.

Twenty-two packers were on the lake, cramming the fish away. Some are delivering loads to Bamfield, about 20 miles to the northwest, where two refrigerator barges are based. To do so they have to head out through shallow channel at high tide to open sea.

At 3:30 p.m. Monday a flotilla started through. Two boats were stranded on a reef and forced to wait for another high tide before floating out.

Dick Crouter, manager of operations in the area for the federal fisheries service, said that already 60,000 fish have spawned in the Nitinat River, which feeds the lake. It can hold about 150,000 spawners.

The brood year, 1968, saw an estimated 130,000 spawners, accounting for this year's bumper crop. Although a bumper crop was expected, nothing so large was foreseen.

50 Fallers Balk At Mate's Firing

PORT ALBERNI — Fifty fallers at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Franklin River logging division near here walked off the job Tuesday morning to protest the firing of veteran faller Otto McDonald.

McDonald, 59, alogger for 37 years, was fired when he refused for the second day in succession to ride in the same truck as several fallers who continued to work during a fallers work stoppage this summer.

A company spokesman said 10 of the 60 fallers at Franklin River went to work Tuesday. On Monday, 17 fallers went to work at the division and two later returned home, he said.

The spokesman said McDonald refused to get on the crummy because of the presence of what he termed scabs.

"The company doesn't recognize that term," the spokesman said.

Bill Hawkes, acting financial secretary of Local 1-85 of the International Woodworkes of America, said the union reiterated its position in a meeting with fallers Monday that "there are no scabs at Franklin River."

Hawkes said none of the fallers at Franklin River worked during the official IWA strike this summer. About six fallers continued working there during most of the unofficial four-month fallers' strike however.

A spokesman for the fallers who walked out said the company tried to test McDonald by putting him to work beside two fallers who did not support the fallers strike to back demands for a standard piecerate pricing formula.

Co-op Car Stations?

PORT ALBERNI — A special committee of the Alberni Labor Council has accepted a motion that a low-cost co-operative car service centre be organized to fight the high cost of automobile maintenance.

The motion was passed by 28 representatives of eight unions.

Described as the first undertaking of its kind in North America, the co-op would furnish normal service station maintenance and repairs to domestic cars and pickup truck-camper units owned by shareholders at a reduced hourly rate. Parts would be at wholesale prices.

The committee has an option to purchase property and a building for $55,000 which could house five service bays.

Walter Behn, committee president, said the total cost of setting up the operation would amount to about $100,000.

The membership, he said, would be open to the public at $45 a share with a required purchase of two shares.

It was indicated that a membership of at least 1,100 would be needed to support the venture financially.

The service centre would offer better-than-union rates to a mechanic and guarantee him full-time employment.

More Bulbs!

Almost every time I come home from downtown these days, my wife takes one look at the parcels in my arms and wails, "Oh no! Not more BULBS!"

She has good reason to be upset, poor girl, for I just haven't got the moral stamina to walk past a bulb display in the stores without buying something. There is such a fascination about these little brown capsules of beauty, particularly when you grow them indoors where you can watch every stage in their development. Already every suitable container in our house has been planted up with bulbs, up to and including a pyrex casserole from the kitchen!

Most of the bulbs commonly sold at this time of the year can be potted up and grown in the house if you don't try to push them ahead too fast, but the easiest of the lot is the Paper White narcissus. The reason why this one poses so few problems is because it doesn't require prolonged storage in cold darkness like most other bulbs; moreover, you don't even need any dirt to plant them in — they will grow beautifully in a bowl of pebbles and water.

Select a pretty ornamental bowl at least three inches deep, and ideally it should have rather steep sides, for with shallow-sloping sides the outer bulbs in the bowl don't have enough depth under them. Buy enough Paper White narcissus bulbs to fill it. Place clean, washed pebbles in the bowl to a depth of two inches, then sit your bulbs on these, crowding them in close together without actually touching one another, then add another inch of pebbles to hold them upright. Add ordinary tap water to the bowl until it is just touching the bottoms of the bulbs.

Some garden books recommend that the bowl of bulbs be kept in a cool fruit cupboard until the roots have formed, but in my experience the Paper Whites will do almost as well at ordinary room temperatures. At our house, we like to set the bowl on the dinner table where it makes something of a conversation piece as we watch the bulbs through their various stages of growth.

At room temperature, evaporation will be much more rapid, though, and you'll probably have to add a little water every second day to maintain the level up to the base of the bulbs. This is somewhat critical, for if the emerging roots are ever allowed to dry out completely, your bulbs will not bloom. By the same token, too much water in the bowl can drown the bulbs.

The bowl of bulbs can stay on the dining table or anywhere in the room until the topgrowth is up about an inch out of the blubs; at this stage the plants will need more light than they would get in the middle of the room; a sunny but quite cool window is ideal. As with most houseplants in windows, the bowl must be rotated a halfturn every day to keep the plants from leaning toward the light.

While direct snuhsine is needed to bring out the flowers, once the buds open the blooms will last longer OUT of the sun. It is a good idea, then, to move your bowl of sweetly scented flowers back to its old spot on the dinner table, or to a coffee table in the living room where the whole family can enjoy their fragile beauty and delicate fragrance.

While this pebble culture of the Paper White narcissus is very easy and almost foolproof, I shoud warn you that it is a go-for-broke proposition; the bulbs, when grown in water, are good for only the one season and should be discarded after flowering. Incidentally, the golden narcissus Grand Soleil d'Or can be grown in exactly the same way as its cousin, the Paper White.

Entente Cordiale

Some weeks ago, in looking through a bin of posters at an art store, I came across one that struck me as exactly right for my French daughter-in-law's bedroom, or chambre, as she calls it.

It was a French poster, in red, white and black, featuring a magnificent black cat. It was an advertisement for a show called Tournee du Chat Noir, avec Rodolphe Salis, a coming attraction at some night club in Montmartre.

In decorating her chambre my daughter-in-law has chosen stark black and white, with touches of vivid red. I felt sure le chat noir was just what it needed. I bought the poster and took it by for inspection.

She was delighted. I promised to have it framed. She hoped it would be ready before her mother arrived from France on her first visit to North America.

I took the poster back to the gallery and ordered a black frame. Unfortunately though, it wasn't until several days after the arrival of Mme. Joyeux from Paris that I was able to pick it up.

With that fine feeling a man has when he is on a pleasant mission I drove over to my daughter-in-law's house with the poster. It looked splendid under glass in its thin black frame.

I rang the doorbell. There was no response. I heard the dog bark. They have a giant Labrador retriever. I was about to leave.

Then I heard a child shout. My grandson. In a moment a shape appeared through the opaque Flemish glass window in the door. But the handle did not turn.

Suddenly it occurred to me what was wrong. My daughter-in-law was out. She had left the boy with her mother. Mme. Joyeux. I remembered, speaking no English, had refused to answer door or telephone, rather than face that agonizing language barrier with some stranger.

What to do? "C'est moi!" I shouted at last, expending possibly one-third of my French vocabulary.

In a moment the handle turned. The door opened. It was Mme. Joyeux. We smiled wildly. I patted my grandson on the head.

"Bon jour," I said.

The dog bounded from somewhere back in the house and leaped on my chest, embracing me.

"Goodie!" shouted my grandson. How good it was, I thought, to hear a word of English.

I showed the poster to Mme. Joyeux. She nooded enthusiastically, rattling on amiably in opaque French.

"It's for your daughter's bedroom," I said. She looked at me solemnly. "Pour la chambre," I explained. Her eyes failed to light up. It was doubtless my Parisian accent. I supposed. Mme. Joyeux is from Tours.

I decided a small glass of wine might improve the moment. "Vin?" I said. "Avez-vous vin?"

Mme. Joyeux looked dubious. I certainly would have thought a woman from Tours would know the French word for wine. I made the motions of pouring and drinking.

"Ah, vin! oui!" she exclaimed.

I was pouring a glass of wine when the phone rang. I picked it up and said "Bon jour." There was a silence; then finally my daughter-in-law's voice, alarmed. "Who is it."

"It's me. Your father-in-law."

"Mr. Smith! I can not believe it! My mother let you in?"

"Yes. I spoke French to her."

"You spoke French? What did you say?"

"I said 'c'est moi'."

"Mr. Smith, I can not believe it. That is excellent! How are you getting along now?"

The dog bounded toward me.

"Googie!" my grandson shouted.

"Oui, goggie," said Mme. Joyeux.

"Don't worry," I told my daughter-in-law, "your mother and I are drinking and your son is teaching her English."

Later, as I was leaving, I turned to Mme. Joyeux at the door and said, "au revoir." There was no point in leaving without having used all the French I knew.

Mme. Joyeux frowned and wagged a finger in reproach. "Good-bye," she said.

Jean Harlow Echo

JAMES BACON

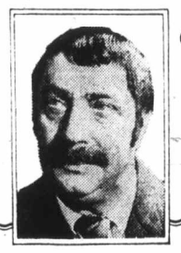
HOLLYWOOD — Did Jean Harlow have a child? A plaintive letter from a San Fernando valley reader who thinks she might possibly be that child, if there was one, poses the question. As the woman put it, she is now asking my help because "no one can possibly be hurt now. The baby, a girl, would have been born July 26, 1926, and placed for adoption at six months of age. She was placed in the Cradle, Evanston, Ill., Jan., 1927. It was stipulated that the girl be adopted by a Christian Scientist couple, no other religion."

Jean Harlow, who practiced the Christian Science religion, was in Chicago at that time. Her mother and stepfather were also there. In 1926, she was 15, the age she eloped from boarding school with a young boy who was her first husband. If memory serves, the marriage was annulled. In January, 1927, the record shows that Jean's mother was in the Chicago area.

The writer was adopted by a Christian Science couple and lived in Chicago until 1937, the year of Miss Harlow's tragic death at the height of her screen fame. Then, the woman writes:

"In 1937 there was a sudden move to California. I may as well say 'I' now because you can see why the interest is shown." Then she went into a lengthly description of a late night visit upon arrival to a Spanish-style house in the Beverly Hills-Wilshire area where her parents met a blondish woman who lived in the house. "The blonde woman was the only one who spoke to me. She seemed quite sad. Certainly I am reaching. I guess everyone wants to find out about themselves. I was told by my adoptive parents that my mother was a showgirl and actress, that my father was from a good family (that meant wealthy)."

The woman, now married, writes that her parents were in moderate circumstances but after the urgent trip to California, they moved into the Sunset Towers, an expensive address, and she was placed in a private Christian Scientist school. Had Jean Harlow provided for a daughter in her will?



Sydney Harris

Victims of Justice

The U.S. government has recently appropriated funds with which to pay the victims of crimes, and their families, for medical costs and other losses suffered at the hands of criminals. This is all to the good.

But there remains a much larger class of "victims" to whom little attention has been paid. These are the victims of society's crime in the matter of bail and pre-trial detention. The crime consists in treating the rich and the poor quite differently when arrested.

In most states — though not all any more — the accused who have some money and property are released on bail or their own recognizance. Those who lack money or property are sent to jail — for weeks and often months — before the trial comes to court.

What about those who are eventually deemed innocent and acquitted? They are demonstrably the victims of society's crime of withholding due process of law from the poor.

They are put in preventive detention not necessarily because they are more dangerous than the others but because they lack funds and because the non-system of criminal justice is not able to dispose of their cases fairly and swiftly.

They are the ones who pay the price for the under-staffing, under-financing, and politicizing of the whole process of U.S. jurisprudence.

The poor person who is put in pre-trial detention often loses his job and the capacity to support his family, who must then go on welfare. This not only deteriorates the whole family, but is an added cost to the government.

And what of the first offender, who, when brought to trial, may be put on probation?

The whole point of putting a youngster or first offender on probation is to avoid the degrading and corrupting effects of jail.

Yet, unable to raise money bail, he is thrown in with convicted criminals for a long period before his trial — which cancels out the possibly rehabilitating effects of the probationary system.

"Unnecessary jail detention, in my opinion," testified James Bennett, former director of th U.S. Bureau of Prisons, "is a factor accounting for failure among those released on probation and even among those who are eventually freed on current charges."

What is even worse, many of those who cannot raise bail will agree to plead "guilty" to a lesser charge simply to avoid a lengthy pre-trial detention.

This makes the conviction record look good, and is a convenience to everyone except the defendant who cannot afford to languish in jail until his trial comes up.

'Dancing Statistics' Claimed Grit Ploy

SWIFT CURRENT, Sask. (CP) — NDP leader David Lewis accused Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday of trying to use "insensitive flippancy" and "dancing statistics" to conceal the fact of rising food prices.

And he attacked the big corporations that he said exploit Canada's resources and squeeze the public with high prices.

But food prices had increased at the same time.

Lewis also disputed the idea that the corporations create jobs. Jobs were created by people and resources.

Tories Pledge Food Probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Tuesday he would expect to know within two weeks after election as prime minister whether to impose a freeze on the prices of some commodities.

He said at a news conference that as soon as a Conservative government is elected Oct. 30 he would launch an inquiry into the reasons for high food costs.

He was elaborating on a campaign pledge that his government would impose wage and price controls if current price increases appear to be causing a general inflation psychology in the country.

In a prepared statement read at the beginning of the conference, Stanfield said the latest wholesale price index figures make consideration of the imposition of controls a matter of urgency.

It said the most recent wholesale index figures mean that "as sure as night follows day the Canadian consumers' purchasing power is going to be further eroded."

The latest Statistics Canada figures have shown the index was 7.8 per cent higher in September than a year ago.

This was an "alarming signal" because the index would have an inevitable effect on consumer prices through October and November.

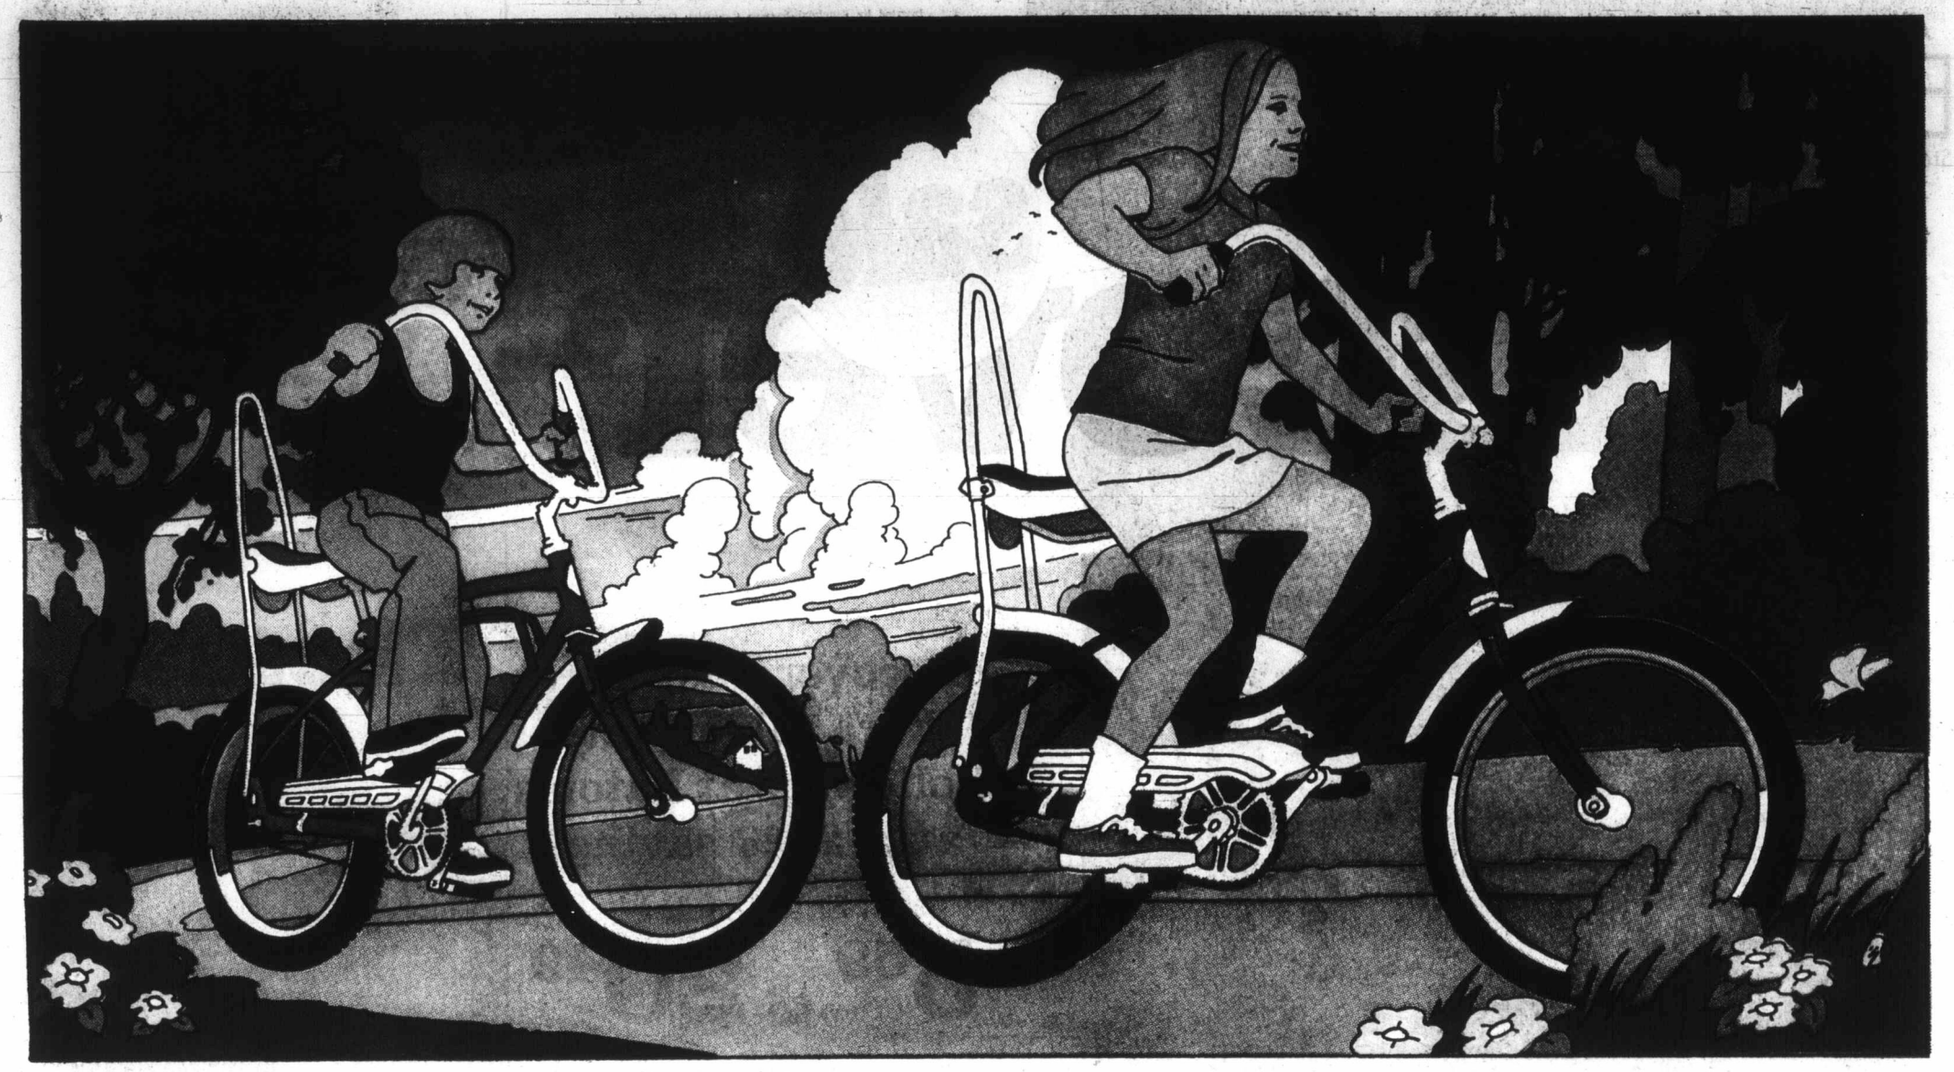
Hey Mom! Your boy or girl could win a C.C.M. high-rise bicycle in The Campbell Vegetable Hunt.



Campbell is giving away 500 Mustang and 500 Cheetah bicycles.

Your child could be riding down the street on his very own brand new bicycle! Think how proud he would be. And now you can help him win his bicycle.

Campbell is giving away 1,000 C.C.M. high-risers – lime green Mustangs for the boys, blue Cheetahs for the girls. These bicycles have 20″ wheels. They sport rugged knobby rear tires, adjustable black Mustang saddles and high back bars. All the things your youngster would love on a bicycle!

THE CAMPBELL VEGETABLE HUNT OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM

RULES OF THE CAMPBELL VEGETABLE HUNT CONTEST

   The Campbell Vegetable Hunt,
   P.O. Box 8189,
   Toronto 1, Ontario.

2. Contest is open to residents of Canada, under 14 years of age, except employees and their immediate families, of Campbell Soup Company Ltd, its advertising agencies and the contest judging organization. Enter as often as you wish, but mail each entry in a separate envelope. Only one prize per family will be awarded. Please remember to indicate if you would like to win a girl's or boy's bike.

3. PRIZES: 1,000 prizes, 500 each of C.C.M. Cheetah (Girls) and Mustang (Boys) high-rise bicycles will be awarded.

4. To be eligible, entries must be postmarked by midnight, November 30, 1972 and be received no later than midnight, December 6, 1972.

5. Selections will be made at random from among entries received. Selected entrants, (or their parent or guardian) must first correctly answer a time-limited skill-testing question before being declared a winner. (The Campbell Vegetable Hunt Contest is for fun! In fairness to children of all ages, all entries are eligible to be selected regardless of the quality of the colouring.)

6. All entries become the property of Campbell Soup Company Ltd, which reserves the right to publish winners' names and addresses. All decisions of the independent contest judging organization are final. All prizes must be accepted as awarded; no substitutions will be made. The contest is subject to Federal and Provincial laws.

Compromise Will Cost Province More

Aged Assured Whole $200

The provincial government will stick by its promise of a $200 monthly income for citizens over 65 living in B.C., despite a federal refusal to share 50 per cent of the cost, Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday.

Following a 30-minute private meeting Tuesday evening with Prime Minister Trudeau, Barrett said the province was prepared to accept an alternate federal suggestion that Ottawa's participation be handled under the Social Assistance Act.

Extra $9 Million

The compromise, resulting from Trudeau's flat refusal to share the cost of the increase — estimated at between $45 million and $60 million — on a 50-50 basis under the Canada Assistance Plan, will likely cost B.C. taxpayers an additional $7.5 million to $9 million, depending on the final cost of the program.

Barrett drove to Pat Bay airport Tuesday afternoon for private talks with the prime minister on the cost-sharing formula which has been subject of daily negotiation between B.C. and Ottawa.

The premier later told reporters outside the Legislature, after making a formal statement to the house, that he was disappointed the federal government wouldn't agree to sharing under the CAP. He added, "We're not giving up hope and we will still continue to pursue our point.

"Meanwhile, we're not turning down federal dollars and we are prepared to go ahead with a federal proposal under the Social Assistance Act, which will mean Ottawa's contribution is about 30 per cent less than it would have been with 50-50 sharing under the CAP."

In his formal statement to the house, Barrett said his half-hour private meeting with the prime minister was "very amiable."

"First, let me state clearly that every senior citizen in B.C. over 65 and covered under the legislation before the house will be receiving as soon as possible a guaranteed minimum income of $200.

"However, I am disappointed that there is a continuing disagreement over the interpretation of the Canada Assistance Plan. The differences between the federal government and our provincial government are still a matter of semantics, but I will not let legal niceties interfere with

Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday he has bought a house in Esquimalt and that he will rent out his home in Port Coquitlam.

He said he and his family will move into the home in late January, except for a son who will be attending Simon Fraser University. Asked where the house was located and to comment on reports the house cost $65,000. Barrett said he didn't think this was of public interest.

Workable Ad Ban 'Only from Ottawa'

By RAY DYKES
Colonist Legislature Staff

A total ban on cigarette advertising would not work unless it came from the federal government, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

Macdonald urged "all people of B.C. to apply to Ottawa with all their force for a total cigarette advertising ban."

In the meantime, the NDP government would restrict such advertising in B.C. by banning billboard promotion of cigarettes and insisting that all United States cigarette packets carried the warning that the surgeon-general has deemed cigarette smoking hazardous to health.

Other restrictions on advertising would be detailed during the committee discussion of the legislation, he added.

Macdonald told the Legislature that U.S. cigarette manufacturers were putting the surgeon-general's warning on packets within their country but not on packets sent to B.C.

"They take it off because they realize the message is effective and it does hurt sales," he explained.

By votes of 42-10 and 41 to 10 government legislation repealing the ban placed on cigarette advertising in B.C. imposed by the Socreds last year was approved in principle.

War Aid Nets $458 Million

MONTREAL (CP) — The department of industry, trade and commerce awarded more than $458 million between 1967 and 1971 to 154 companies in Canada producing war materials for the United States government, says a report released Tuesday.

The report was prepared by seven university students led by Professor S. J. Noumoff of McGill University's department of political science.

The report—How to Make a Killing—says the federal government supported selected development programs, paid half the cost of modernizing plant equipment and supported establishment of production of components and materials destined for use by U.S. forces in Indochina.

The report says that 45 of the 154 companies were American-owned. These companies received 40 per cent of the money granted by the Canadian government.

The majority of the contracts were for transport aircraft, aircraft engines and airframe components, electronic navigation and communication equipment, marine equipment, vehicle components and spare parts, the report says.

Noumoff said his researchers sent out 778 questionnaires to companies asking them if they received contracts from the Pentagon.

They received 205 replies, and 73 companies acknowledged receiving U.S. defence department contracts.

The report says four companies denied receiving such contracts although the Pentagon said they had.

It says the four companies were: Canadian General Electric, North American Rockwell, Westinghouse Canada Ltd. and Okanagan Helicopters Ltd.

182 mph Wind Smashes Fiji

SUVA, Fiji (UPI) — Hurricane Bebe Tuesday swept across Fiji's largest island with winds as high as 182 miles an hour, bringing death and levelling towns.

Weathermen said the storm blew westward out of Fiji into the sea early today and was moving in a southeasterly direction.

Fiji is a group of about 60 south Pacific islands with a population of about 150,000 persons.

On Viti Levu, Fiji's largest island, towns and villages in the western districts reeled from the hurricane in which at least two persons died. A child was killed by flying debris and a man was electrocuted in a Suva suburb by a fallen power line.

At Lautoka, Fiji's second biggest town, 180 hospital patients were evacuated to an emergency centre during the height of the storm. Winds blew off the roof of the children's ward and the men's ward began to collapse as other sections of the building were torn away.

A CP Air spokesman in Vancouver said Tuesday that his company was not able to contact the airport at Nandi. For this reason, a scheduled flight to Fiji Monday was held in Honolulu and the 40 passengers involved returned to Vancouver Tuesday.

The spokesman added that he felt confident that regular flights would resume Thursday.

"At this moment there are no plans to cancel Thursday's flight," he said.

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Desmond O'Malley, the Republic of Ireland's justice minister, said Tuesday night that United States money finances a "campaign of violence" in Northern Ireland and warned Americans not to be duped into giving money which might end up in the hands of the Irish Republican Army.

"To contribute money to the IRA is to damage, grievously, the interests of Ireland and the Irish people," he said.

Pound Hits Record Low

LONDON (AP) — The pound sterling fell to an all-time low against the United States dollar Tuesday.

Selling was heavy. By afternoon the pound had dropped more than 1½ cents to $2.37575 U.S.

The pound has been floating down outside fixed exchange rates since June, when it was last set at $2.60. The British government had been expected to return eventually to a new fixed exchange rate of around $2.40.

Thieu Brands Hanoi Truce 'Cunning Plot'

UPI, Reuter

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu said Tuesday night that South Vietnam should pepare for a ceasefire but he denounced any truce which lacks a satisfactory political agreement on the fate of the Saigon government.

In a two-hour national radio and television address, Thieu confirmed that in meetings with Henry Kissinger, U.S. national security adviser, during the last two days he was presented with Communist proposals for a settlement. But he blasted the proposals as a "cunning plot."

Denouncing any truce which lacks a satisfactory political agreement on the fate of the Saigon government, he implied that while a ceasefire might be on its way in a month or two, he did not approve of it.

His repetition of the tough line he has taken against a three-part government and the insistence that any solution must be agreed on by the South Vietnamese government were remarks meant for Washington to show South Vietnamese resistance at being pushed into a settlement.

In Paris, meanwhile, the North Vietnamese delegation to the peace talks said Thieu's speech was proof that he is obstinately opposed to peace. The delegation accused the U.S. of using the South Vietnamese president as its "zealous spokesman" in its policy of prolonging the ear.

Arctic Ice Vanishing Act Speeding Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a definite warming trend over the North Pole and it is melting the polar ice cap even more rapidly than meteorologists had expected, Arctic flyer-explorer Bernt Balchen said Tuesday.

Balchen said he personally confirmed melting reports in a series of recent flights over Labrador, Greenland, Norway, the Canadian Arctic and the polar sea.

"We received a fairly clear picture of the whole situation," Balchen said. "There is no doubt about it, the Arctic polar ice is degrading — and maybe faster than had been anticipated.

"We may have an open ocean in another 20 years, or in no more than 40 years," he said.

In articles and speeches, the Norwegian-born Balchen previously had forecast an ice-free Arctic Ocean by the year 2000.

He contends that the warming climate, induced in part perhaps by volcanic activity in the Philippines, eventually may make possible tanker shipments of oil from Alaskan and Canadian fields, and water transport of Far North mineral products such as uranium, nickel, iron, lead and zinc.

Holberg Log Camp Gets Beauty Boost

By JEAN SORENSEN
Colonist Correspondent

HOLBERG — A five-year beauty treatment has left the logging community here with a new outlook, and the 'face-lift' has cost Rayonier Canada Ltd. more than $1.5 million.

"We have about the nicest accommodations on the coast," Karl Yzerman, camp manager, said last week.

Plans to design and extend the accommodations and facilities started in 1968 when the timber company received additional cutting rights.

Yzerman said that up until 1956 the Holberg camp was acclaimed to be one of the largest floating camps in the world. Gradually, the bunkhouses, cookhouse, community hall, and married quarters became dilapidated and needed to be replaced.

With the timber grant, the company decided to look at a five-year rejuvenation program for the whole community.

Work in the project includes the building of five new bunkhouses, renovating one, moving in by scow a 120 by 50 by 17 foot community hall from Coal Harbour, the hiring of a fulltime recreation director, a $50,000 addition to the arena which houses a coffee and pool room, the importing of 35 homes and the building of a trailer park.

One bunkhouse, which will be renovated next summer, will complete the blanket project.

Yzerman, who has been with the project since it started, said the company, realizing this was going to be a permanent camp, "wanted to make it the best they could."

Facilities for married men were developed to encourage them to work in the semi-isolated community, Yzerman said.

"A man working in a semi-isolated community is a lot happier if he has his family with him."

Houses for 10 married couples were moved to the area in 1968 by Apex Moving of Vancouver. The company transported two single homes and four duplexes by scow from Port Alice.

A year later, 25 more homes were moved in by scow.

Yzerman estimates the costs for the 35 homes plus barging to have run in the vicinity of half a million dollars.

He said that with the houses electrical, water, and sewage facilities were provided.

"The townsite didn't even exist. We had to make that out of the side of the mountain."

Yzerman said foundations for houses had to be completed, made to measure, before the houses arrived. He estimates the community has 90 families. Revamping the community, also called for a 15-unit trailer park, he said.

Heavy duty machinery is now working at clearing a second site for more trailers. "The first trailer park filled up immediately," he said.

Yzerman estimates that there are 35 trailers in the community. The rent on trailer lots, includiig water, power, garbage collection and sewer, is $20 a month.

"Really, the $20 is to maintain the services and there is no charge for the rental of land," he said.

Houses rent for between $40 and $85 a month.

The five bunkhouses are all 23-man units while the renovated bunkhouse, formerly a 64-man building, now holds 32 men.

The accommodations for nearly 200 single men have cost the company an estimated $400,000, Yzerman said.

The community hall,which has 6,000 square feet of floor space, was moved in two pieces by barge from Coal Harbor by Apex Moving.

Yzerman said the building was used at Coal Harbour as the freezer for the old whaling station.

He said the company has been one of the few to hire a full-time recreation director for the recreation hall. The director has worked in the community for two years and "the hall is going all the time."

"The women have it in the mornings and afternoons and the single fellows have it on the weekends."

Onto the recreation hall was built a $50,000 addition which features a pool hall, a shuffleboard, a post office, a branch of the Vancouver Island Regional Library, and a coffee shop.

Grant Missing, Town Worried

COURTENAY — City council has expressed concern that no supplementary welfare grant for 1972 has been received from the municipal affairs department.

City administrator Derrick Ratcliffe said in a letter to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer, "While we don't wish to burden you with minor problems at this time, council does feel you should be made aware of the procedure followed in the past in the granting of additional financial assistance to the smaller municipalities by the department."

The letter outlined the change in the welfare cost-sharing formula in 1967 which Ratcliffe said forced the smaller municipalities to cut back on other "normal" development program expenditure in order to pay the increased social welfare costs.

Representation to the municipal affairs department did result in a "small measure of relief," he said but added, "the manner in which supplementary grants were first calculated has always been something of a mystery to this city. However, we have in the past taken the attitude that a little something was better than nothing and left it that way although this year we did ask for an explanation from the minister but got nowhere."

Ald. Bob McPhee said he considered the letter both timely and well done.

$63,000 Over in Courtenay District

Schools Surplus Plan Hit

COURTENAY — A "sizeable" budget surplus of $63,000 appears to be in sight for Courtenay school district according to secretary-treasurer Roy Mills.

The management team of Mills and superintendent Reg Cox proposed to take $30,000 of the surplus in the instruction account and expend it within the same section for additional staff, and recommended further that the balance of the surplus of approximately $33,000 to be referred to the management team for proposals in regard to its disbursement to be placed before the board in November.

The proposal brought a howl of protest from trustee Terry Ryan who said he objected because such committments would have a decided impact upon next year's budget.

The budget report indicated an over-expenditure in the administration account of approximately $10,000 due in part to a survey carried out for the board.

The surplus in the instruction account was attributable to fewer pupils requiring fewer teachers than had been budgeted for previously. It was stressed at the meeting that the surplus was not due to any over-cutting of the pupil teacher ratio, which stands the same as before the reduction from 110 per cent formula to 108 formula.

Without the unexpected drop of 168 pupils and a year's leave of absence taken by Zola, the French co-ordinator, the budget would have only shown a surplus of about $8,000.

Section C of the budget utilities shows a deficit due in large part according to Mills to janitor salaries and a "tremendous amount of major illness experienced by senior members of the staff."

Maintenance he said is "projecting toward a $35,000 surplus." But Mills pointed out it should be remembered "that as a result of the agreement regarding the accounting method used for recovering the cost of the airport school by Canada from this school district a reserve fund of $40,000 was created in this section.

Setting that $40,000 to one side, the D section would project towards an over-expenditure of $5,000.

Superintendent Cox told trustees that two teachers are needed in the district one to teach math and science and one to teach English and socials. He said if two teachers with the appropriate majors can be found they should be employed half time at Lake Trail and half-time at Courtenay junior secondary school.

Trustees agreed to the hiring of the two teachers and instructed the management team to bring recommendations to the board for allocation of the remaining monies.

COWICHAN BAY — The big fishing operation at Nitinat Lake that began Sunday has been extended until further notice by federal fisheries officials. Originally it was to have ended today.

The commerical fishing by 80 seiners and 95 gillnetters was allowed to re-establish a biological balance and reduce fish overpopulation in the tidal lake at the west coast of Vancouver Island. One of the fishing companies involved, Canadian Fishing Company, made history by using trucks to take the catches from the lake to Cowichan Bay from where they are shipped by packers to the company's cannery in Vancouver Harbor.

Tough Gap

Some of the other companies involved are B.C. Packers, Queen Charlotte Fisheries and Francis Millerd. The other companies take the fish through the "gap" that connects the lake with the Pacific Ocean. According to old time fishermen "the gap" is difficult to navigate because of strong currents and a sandbank. One of the retired fishermen who watched the loading operation at Cowichan Bay from large dump trucks to the packer, said the gap has claimed many lives and boaats during the past 60 years.

Good Factors

The same company has two more packers, Cape Scott and Canfisco. O'Connor said the trucking of the fish has been very successful. One return trip to Nitnat Lzke is about 140 miles. There are about 18 trucks and drivers and fishermen are working around the clock. From visual observations fisheries officers estimated between one half to three quarter millions of fish in Nitinat Lake before the big fishing operation began.

O'Connor said big fishing operations like the one at Nitinat occasionally occur and he referred to similiar situations like the Admas River sockeye run in 1950 and the Bella Coola pink salmon run in 1962.

Good spawning conditions and allow mortality rate on the high sea are factors for exceptionally good fishing.

The last commercial fishing at Nitinat Lake took place 11 years ago. Notices that commercial fishing would take place at Nitinat were posted publicaly Oct. 13.

Fish averaging 8.4 pounds made some nets so heavy that there was difficulty in lifting them into the boats.

"I've never seen anything like it in my life, seiner skipper Denver Secord said.

"They are lying in schools off the Nitinat bar for miles at sea. What a way to end up the fishing season! What a Christmas present this will be for the boys."

The 12-mile-long lake had not been opened to commercial fishboats since 1961. Observers watching the fish pile up thought the total catch might reach a million salmon.

Ban Imposed

Catches of a million fish were not uncommon here many years ago, but post-war takes were so poor that a total fishing ban was imposed.

Eldon Smith of Vancouver, owner-skipper of a gillnetter, had a take of 824 fish in 15 hours. Monday morning he delivered 8,238 pounds of fish to the packer at 17 cents a pound.

He said he and a helper would take turns getting a little sleep while fishing day and night through the opening.

Twenty-two packers were on the lake, cramming the fish away. Some are delivering loads to Bamfield, about 20 miles to the northwest, where two refrigerator barges are based. To do so they have to head out through shallow channel at high tide to open sea.

At 3:30 p.m. Monday a flotilla started through. Two boats were stranded on a reef and forced to wait for another high tide before floating out.

Dick Crouter, manager of operations in the area for the federal fisheries service, said that already 60,000 fish have spawned in the Nitinat River, which feeds the lake. It can hold about 150,000 spawners.

The brood year, 1968, saw an estimated 130,000 spawners, accounting for this year's bumper crop. Although a bumper crop was expected, nothing so large was foreseen.

50 Fallers Balk At Mate's Firing

PORT ALBERNI — Fifty fallers at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Franklin River logging division near here walked off the job Tuesday morning to protest the firing of veteran faller Otto McDonald.

McDonald, 59, alogger for 37 years, was fired when he refused for the second day in succession to ride in the same truck as several fallers who continued to work during a fallers work stoppage this summer.

A company spokesman said 10 of the 60 fallers at Franklin River went to work Tuesday. On Monday, 17 fallers went to work at the division and two later returned home, he said.

The spokesman said McDonald refused to get on the crummy because of the presence of what he termed scabs.

"The company doesn't recognize that term," the spokesman said.

Bill Hawkes, acting financial secretary of Local 1-85 of the International Woodworkes of America, said the union reiterated its position in a meeting with fallers Monday that "there are no scabs at Franklin River."

Hawkes said none of the fallers at Franklin River worked during the official IWA strike this summer. About six fallers continued working there during most of the unofficial four-month fallers' strike however.

A spokesman for the fallers who walked out said the company tried to test McDonald by putting him to work beside two fallers who did not support the fallers strike to back demands for a standard piecerate pricing formula.

Co-op Car Stations?

PORT ALBERNI — A special committee of the Alberni Labor Council has accepted a motion that a low-cost cooperative car service centre be organized to fight the high cost of automobile maintenance.

The motion was passed by 28 representatives of eight unions.

Described as the first undertaking of its kind in North America, the co-op would furnish normal service station maintenance and repairs to domestic cars and pickup truck-camper units owned by shareholders at a reduced hourly rate. Parts would be at wholesale prices.

The committee has an option to purchase property and a building for $55,000 which could house five service bays.

Walter Behn, committee president, said the total cost of setting up the operation would amount to about $100,000.

The membership, he said, would be open to the public at $45 a share with a required purchase of two shares.

It was indicated that a membership of at least 1,100 would be needed to support the venture financially.

The service centre would offer better-than-union rates to a mechanic and guarantee him full-time employment.

Nanaimo Commission Seeks Details

Davis Harbor Move 'Political Manoeuvre'

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo Harbor Commission is seeking more information from the federal government on an announcement Sunday that effectively killed a proposed development in Nanaimo harbor.

Environment minister Jack Davis said that his department would not permit the development in the rarbor. Instead he has said it must be built in Northumberland Channel outside the harbor limits.

Harbor commissioner Doug Greer said Tuesday the announcement came as a surprise to the commission since the report on a study of the plan commissioned by the federal government has not yet been handed down.

"We thought there would be no announcement until the study was brought down and we had had a chance to look it over," Greer said.

The statement by Davis, he added, said agreement had been reached between Davis and transport minister Don Jamieson regarding the federal position on the proposal.

"We are not aware of any such agreement so we have taken steps to get in touch with Jamieson to find out about it," he said.

Tully was hired by the harbor commission to study the plan and make recommendations on its environmental aspects.

After a detailed study of both the plan and it's proposed site Tully's report suggested changing the route of the river channel at the estuary to provide an alternate channel for spawning adult salmon and young salmon which inhabit the estuary. Prior to returning to salt water. Tully's suggestions conformed fully to the federal fisheries act the harbor commission said.

Cayuse Dynamite Theft Repeated

LAKE COWICHAN — B.C. Forest Products Cayeuse division was broken into last weekend, and the thieves took an estimated 750 pounds of dynamite, creating an uneasy atmosphere for Lake Cowichan RCMP.

The theft is the second time this month dynamite has been stolen from the company. A 50 pound case of the explosive was taken Oct. 6, and detonated the following week at Cottonwood Creek near Youbou. RCMP said the blast was an attempt by the thieves to block the creek.

B.C. Forest Products was uncertain of the amount stolen last weekend as the thieves also took the magazine records. The company estimated fifteen 50 pound cases were taken, along with blasting caps and fuses. Lake Cowichan RCMP said they are investigating the thefts "like mad."

TOFINO — Wickannish Inn in Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach is expected to be bought by the federal government in 1974. Plans call for renting the hotel under a short-term lease with the present owners being given first refusal, park superintendent George Trachuk said Tuesday.

NANAIMO — All three members of city council whose terms will expire at the end of this year will seek re-election in December. The latest to confirm his intention is Ald. Gino Sedola, Nanaimo area schol teacher, who will be seeking his second term in office. Earlier, veteran aldermen Gordon MacKay and Bill Hunter said they would definitely be in the race. The only opposition so far is from Burt Ogden an organizer for the United Fishermen and Allied Worker's Union. He was an unsuccessful aldermanic candidate in Nanaimo last year.

Fall Bazaar

CAMPBELL RIVER — The Ladies' Auxiliary to Branch No. 137, Royal Canadian Legion, has completed plans for its annual fall bazaar to be held in the Legion Hall on Saturday, October 28, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Schools Get $7,000

Grant Eases Crowding At Cowichan

DUNCAN — The problem of overcrowded classrooms in Cowichan school district has been relieved somewhat by a $7,000 grant from the department of education.

At the Monday evening school board meeting, the trustees were told new teachers would be hired at Drinkwater and Koksilah Elementary Schools and at Mount Prevost Junior High School.

The grant was approved as an overexpenditure on the district's 1972 budget, and will pay the teachers' salaries until the end of the year.

In other school board news, the district's policy of giving preference to Cowichan graduates when hiring new secretarial staff would not be discriminatory providing the advertisements did not specify recent graduates, said John Sherlock, director of the Human Rights Act.

In a letter to the board, Sherlock said the word recent could lead to a complaint on the basis of age discrimination. The discussion arose at the board's last meeting when trustee Terry Taylor presented a resolution that the board change its hiring policy as he felt it discriminated on origin. The resolution was passed and will be given second reading at the next school board meeting.

Since the first reading chairman David Bradbury said he had contacted three other school districts and found they also advertised for graduates from their own district.

Subdivision Banned in Unsewered Areas

PARKSVILLE — Parksville village council has approved a motion that no further subdivisions be allowed in unsewered areas in the village until the department of health has taken percolation tests and approved the said subdivision. This arose from a complaint received from Parksville Ratepayers' Association about ditches in the Westerlea subdivision area being contaminated by sewage.

Mayor Ray Young and members of the council took exception to a statement from Ratepayers' Association spokesman Dr. Emil Schafer that if an epidemic should break out the village would be responsible. The opinion was expressed by some members of the council that the subdivision in question had not been properly planned in the first place and a further motion was approved to ask the health department to check septic tanks in the Westerlea area. A ditching program is in progress but council feels this will not alleviate the problem but will only extend the area of contamination.

In other matters council approved a motion to enter into a lease agreement with the regional district for a site for an arena if and when a referendum to build such an arena is passed. Council approved a three and a half acre site in the Community park near the present community hall following a request by letter from District 69 Arena Committee.

Ald. W. D. Kurtz requested that letters of appreciation be sent to two members of the business community who had contributed towards the cost of paving a lane near the post office. Other contributions are being requested from adjacent places of business towards the paving project.

Building inspector W. J. Filion submitted a report on building permits issued between January 1 and October 15 in Parksville. These include 22 residential buildings including a 26-unit apartment building, to a total value of $605,300, seven commercial buildings to the value of $272,000, three commercial alterations and additions, $12,600 and 13 residential alterations and additions, $18,900. Total value of building permits $908,800. The total of all of 1971 was $1,109,329.

Approval was given to enter into a land use contract in response to requests for rezoning. Central Auto Court requested permission to expand facilities and Gordon Baker asked for a change in zoning to start a project on property known as Holmwood, a former nursing home. A rough plan submitted by Baker showed plans for a dining lounge, a motel and swimming pool on the property. Bylaws will be prepared to designate the two properties as development areas.

Three readings were given to a bylaw to assess an additional charge of $1.50 per month to householders outside the municipality who are on the village sewer system. This charge is to offset a frontage tax paid by residents inside the village.

Friend Joins Heroin Addict In Fraud Scheme

A story of how heroin addiction can affect a friend of the user as well as the addict himself was told Monday in Victoria Provincial Court.

Brenda Rose Collins, 17, of 740 Newbury in Saanich, pleaded guilty to two Saanich fraud charges and was remanded by Judge William Ostler to Nov. 7 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Gregory Harris, 17, charged with Miss Collins in one case, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to four months definite and eight months indeterminate. The term will run at the same time as similar sentences Harris, an admitted heroin user, got last week for uttering and a break-in.

A Saanich detective testified Harris stole a bank charge card from his mother's mail about Sept. 12. Next day, said the detective, Harris offered this scheme to Miss Collins:

She would sign the charge card and use it to buy expensive clothing. She would turn the clothing over to Harris and he would sell it for cash, paying her some of it.

The detective said Miss Collins signed the card and used it the same day to buy about $210 worth of clothing at two stores. He said some of the clothing was retained by Miss Collins and another person while Harris gave the other person $15.

The officer testified Harris told police "he sold a $100 jacket for a capsule of heroin (usual price: $20) and sold another jacket (worth $67) for $35 and also used that money for heroin."

The day after, said the detective, Miss Collins took the card to five stores and used it to buy a turntable and clothing worth a total of about $175.

Crash Victim Now 'Critical'

William White, 47, of 1959 Kaltasin Road in Sooke, was reported in critical condition Monday in Victoria General Hospital with head injuries received in a traffic accident Sunday.

Sooke RCMP said he was walking on the roadside at Sooke and Idlemore roads when he was struck by a car driven by Ritchie Parkin of Sooke.

HOW TO WRITE
A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday.

A total ban on cigarette advertising would not work unless it came from the federal government, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

Plea to U.S.: Arms for IRA Hurt Ireland

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Desmond O'Malley, the Republic of Ireland's justice minister, said Tuesday night that United States money finances a "campaign of violence" in Northern Ireland and warned Americans not to be duped into giving money which might end up in the hands of the Irish Republican Army.

"To contribute money to the IRA is to damage, grievously, the interests of Ireland and the Irish people," he said.

Compromise Will Cost Province More

Aged Assured Whole $200

The provincial government will stick by its promise of a $200 monthly income for citizens over 65 living in B.C., despite a federal refusal to share 50 per cent of the cost, Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday.

Following a 30-minute private meeting Tuesday evening with Prime Minister Trudeau, Barrett said the province was prepared to accept an alternate federal suggestion that Ottawa's participation be handled under the Social Assistance Act.

Extra $9 Million

The compromise, resulting from Trudeau's flat refusal to share the cost of the increase — estimated at between $45 million and $60 million — on a 50-50 basis under the Canada Assistance Plan, will likely cost B.C. taxpayers an additional $7.5 million to $9 million, depending on the final cost of the program.

Barrett drove to Pat Bay airport Tuesday afternoon for private talks with the prime minister on the cost-sharing formula which has been subject of daily negotiation between B.C. and Ottawa.

The premier later told reporters outside the Legislature, after making a formal statement to the house, that he was disappointed the federal government wouldn't agree to sharing under the CAP. He added, "We're not giving up hope and we will still continue to pursue our point.

"Meanwhile, we're not turning down federal dollars and we are prepared to go ahead with a federal proposal under the Social Assistance Act, which will mean Ottawa's contribution is about 30 per cent less than it would have been with 50-50 sharing under the CAP."

In his formal statement to the house, Barrett said his half-hour private meeting with the prime minister was "very amiable."

"First, let me state clearly that every senior citizen in B.C. over 65 and covered under the legislation before the house will be receiving as soon as possible a guaranteed minimum income of $200.

"However, I am disappointed that there is a continuing disagreement over the interpretation of the Canada Assistance Plan. The differences between the federal government and our provincial government are still a matter of semantics, but I will not let legal niceties interfere with

Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday he has bought a house in Esquimalt and that he will rent out his home in Port Coquitlam.

He said he and his family will move into the home in late January, except for a son who will be attending Simon Fraser University. Asked where the house was located and to comment on reports the house cost $65,000, Barrett said he didn't think this was of public interest.

Workable Ad Ban 'Only from Ottawa'

A total ban on cigarette advertising would not work unless it came from the federal government, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

Macdonald urged "all people of B.C. to apply to Ottawa with all their force for a total cigarette advertising ban."

In the meantime, the NDP government would restrict such advertising in B.C. by banning billboard promotion of cigarettes and insisting that all United States cigarette packets carried the warning that the surgeon-general has deemed cigarette smoking hazardous to health.

Other restrictions on advertising would be detailed during the committee discussion of the legislation, he added.

Macdonald told the Legislature that U.S. cigarette manufacturers were putting the surgeon-general's warning on packets within their country but not on packets sent to B.C.

"They take it off because they realize the message is effective and it does hurt sales," he explained.

By votes of 42-10 and 41 to 10 government legislation repealing the ban placed on cigarette advertising in B.C. imposed by the Socreds last year was approved in principle.

On Viti Levu, Fiji's largest island , towns and villages in the western districts reeled from the hurricane in which at least two persons died. A child was killed by flying debris and a man was electrocuted in a Suva suburb by a fallen power line.

At Lautoka, Fiji's second biggest town, 180 hospital patients were evacuated to an emergency centre during the height of the storm. Winds blew off the roof of the children's ward and the men's ward began to collapse as other sections of the building were torn away.

A CP Air spokesman in Vancouver said Tuesday that his company was not able to contact the airport at Nandi. For this reason, a scheduled flight to Fiji Monday was held in Honolulu and the 40 passengers involved returned to Vancouver Tuesday.

The spokesman added that he felt confident that regular flights would resume Thursday.

"At this moment there are no plans to cancel Thursday's flight," he said.

Mail Bomb Target Arab

CAIRO (Reuter) — A parcel bomb addressed to a leading member of the Palestine Liberation Organization was discovered at Cairo airport Tuesday, the official Middle East news agency reported.

The parcel, disguised as a book, was sent from Belgrade and was addressed to Farouk Al-Qujddoumi.

MONTREAL (CP) — The department of industry, trade and commerce awarded more than $458 million between 1967 and 1971 to 154 companies in Canada producing war materials for the United States government, says a report released Tuesday.

The report was prepared by seven university students led by Professor S. J. Noumoff of McGill University's department of political science.

The report—How to Make a Killing—says the federal government supported selected development programs, paid half the cost of modernizing plant equipment and supported establishment of production of components and materials destined for use by U.S. forces in Indochina.

The report says that 45 of the 154 companies were American-owned. These companies received 40 per cent of the money granted by the Canadian government.

The majority of the contracts were for transport aircraft, aircraft engines and airframe components, electronic navigation and communication equipment, marine equipment, vehicle components and spare parts, the report says.

Noumoff said his researchers sent out 778 questionnaires to companies asking them if they received contracts from the Pentagon.

They received 205 replies, and 73 companies acknowledged receiving U.S. defence department contracts.

The report says four companies denied receiving such contracts although the Pentagon said they had.

It says the four companies were: Canadian General Electric, North American Rockwell, Westinghouse Canada Ltd., and Okanagan Helicopters Ltd.

Pound Hits Record Low

LONDON (AP) — The pound sterling fell to an all-time low against the United States dollar Tuesday.

Selling was heavy. By afternoon the pound had dropped more than 1½ cents to $2.37575 U.S.

The pound has been floating down outside fixed exchange rates since June, when it was last set at $2.60. The British government had been expected to return eventually to a new fixed exchange rate of around $2.40.

Thieu Brands Hanoi Truce 'Cunning Plot'

UPI, Reuter

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu said Tuesday night that South Vietnam should pepare for a ceasefire but he denounced any truce which lacks a satisfactory political agreement on the fate of the Saigon government.

In a two-hour national radio and television address, Thieu confirmed that in meetings with Henry Kissinger, U.S. national security adviser, during the last two days he was presented with Communist proposals for a settlement. But he blasted the proposals as a "cunning plot."

Denouncing any truce which lacks a satisfactory political agreement on the fate of the Saigon government, he implied that while a ceasefire might be on its way in a month or two, he did not approve of it.

His repetition of the tough line he has taken against a three-part government and the insistence that any solution must be agreed on by the South Vietnamese government were remarks meant for Washington to show South Vietnamese resistance at being pushed into a settlement.

In Paris, meanwhile, the North Vietnamese delegation to the peace talks said Thieu's speech was proof that he is obstinately opposed to peace. The delegation accused the U.S. of using the South Vietnamese president as its "zealous spokesman" in its policy of prolonging the ear.

Arctic Ice Vanishing Act Speeding Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a definite warming trend over the North Pole and it is melting the polar ice cap even more rapidly than meteorologists had expected, Arctic flyer-explorer Bernt Balchen said Tuesday.

Balchen said he personally confirmed melting reports in a series of recent flights over Labrador, Greenland, Norway, the Canadian Arctic and the polar sea.

"We received a fairly clear picture of the whole situation," Balchen said. "There is no doubt about it, the Arctic polar ice is degrading — and maybe faster than had been anticipated.

"We may have an open ocean in another 20 years, or in no more than 40 years," he said.

In articles and speeches, the Norwegian-born Balchen previously had forecast an ice-free Arctic Ocean by the year 2000.

He contends that the warming climate, induced in part perhaps by volcanic activity in the Philippines, eventually may make possible tanker shipments of oil from Alaskan and Canadian fields, and water transport of Far North mineral products such as uranium, nickel, iron, lead and zinc.

Thieu Scoffs At Kissinger

PARIS (Reuter) — The Paris newspaper France-Soir reports in a dispatch from Saigon that President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam described Henry Kissinger as "that professor who came here (Saigon) to get his Nobel Peace Prize."

Thieu purportedly made the scoffing remark about President Nixon's chief adviser before an assembly of South Vietnam politicians this week, the newspaper's Saigon correspondent said.

Costly Frisbees No-Go for War

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Navy spent $375,000 and four years studying Frisbees to see if the flight characteristics of the plastic toys could be adapted for warfare.

It was no go.

From atop Hurricane Mesa in Utah, scientists sent Frisbees and clay pigeons spinning into the air. Tracking cameras monitored the flights from the 1,000-foot-high cliff.

The results of the tests were reported in a non-classified paper in which the navy was careful to note that Frisbee is "a registered trademark of the Whamo Manufacturing Co." of San Gabriel, Calif.

Lt.-Cmdr. Hugo Hardt, who took over the program two years ago, said the navy was looking for a new way of delivering flares.

Galaxy's Speed Seemingly Faster Than Light

By ED MEAGHER
Colonist - Los Angeles Times

PASADENA, Calif. — A galaxy which appears to be expanding faster than the speed of light — Casting doubt on a fundamental law of physics — has been reported at a meeting of the high energy astrophysics disivision of the American Astronomical Society at California Institute of Technology here.

The fast-moving galaxy was described by Dr. Kenneth Kellerman of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, W.Va.

Earlier reports by astronomers have told a quasars seemingly expanding at speeds exceeding the 186,000-miles-a-second velocity of light — which has long been accepted by physicists as the ultimate in speed. But never before has there been a report of a galaxy moving at such speed.

Quasars, discovered only in 1963, are the brightest visible objects ever seen by man, 100 times brighter than the brightest galaxies, which are themselves comprised of trillions of stars.

Quasars also emit enormous amounts of radio waves and are located at the far ends of the universe, more than 8 billion light years away — or a distance which is 8 billion times the 6 trillion miles that light travels in one year.

Kellerman indicated that there now are two quasars, as well as the galaxy, and now both are under observation through radio sources.

The galaxy and two quasars appear to be expanding, Kellerman said, while a fourth object seems to be contracting.

The discoveries, observers said, simply add to the puzzlement of the astronomical community.

At one time there were 10 explanations of the probably impossible speed of the galaxy and quasars. All but three have been shot down and the three remaining are suspect.

One is called the "cannon ball explanation." This describes two masses moving in opposite directions, with the one traveling toward the viewer giving the impression of moving at a speed faster than light.

The second is described as the "Christmas tree model" because the masses "light up and go off" at irregular intervals.

The third simply holds that if the objects are comparatively nearby, they would not have to be expanding faster than the speed of light to give such an impression.

Kellerman also reported on a mass, called the B. L. Lacert, which was at first believed to be a star, but now is simply described as an unknown substance.

The astronomer said it grows bright and dim by turns. It is in two parts, he said, and the two seem to be moving together at great speed.

Big Balloon Blocks Road

PATERSON, N.Y. (AP) — Motorists were startled here when a bright red 80-foot balloon landed in the middle of the highway. Three balloonists were uninjured, but police said there was a massive traffic jam while the balloon was deflated and removed.

Nude Photos, Lost Lawyer Puzzle Parts

LONDON (UPI) — A prosecutor at the Old Bailey criminal court called it a curious case as he listed its ingredients — a wealthy businessman, a pretty model, a disputed will, a Mexican duke and a disappearing lawyer.

Buzzard gave the details as he outlined his case against Eric Alba-Teran, and a 22-year-old teacher named Shelagh Macintosh.

Both pleaded innocent to charges of forging Raphael's will. Alba-Teran also denied obtaining Raphael's Rolls-Royce by means of a forged letter.

Buzzard said a third conspirator, lawyer Roland Shulman, has left England and is believed living in South America.

Shulman, Alba-Teran and Miss Macintosh produced the will, written on the back of an envelope, a few days after Raphael died in the crash of his private plane in France.

Aside from the curious bequest of 12 cents and the four photos to his wife, model Penny Brahms, the will left most of Raphael's fortune to Shulman. Alba-Teran and Miss Macintosh signed the will as witnesses.

The prosecutor claimed Miss Macintosh admitted the will was forged. He said the trio searched Raphael's apartment after his death and found an envelope bearing his signature. Miss Macintosh, he said, typed the forged will above this genuine signature and she and Alba-Teran singed as witnesses.

Alba-Teran contended the will was genuine and that he had witnessed it while Raphael was alive, Buzzard said.

Airport Scuffle Brings Back French Jetliner

MARSEILLE, France (UPI) — An Air Inter jetliner returned to Marseille's Marignane Airport minutes after taking off Tuesday because a Soviet passenger might have been forced on the flight against his will, an official for the French domestic airline said.

The Soviet citizen, identified in Marseille as Wladimir Tatevossian, 30, fought with two other Russians at the airport Tuesday morning, an Air Inter official at Orly Airport in Paris said.

He said when the three later boarded an Air Inter flight for Paris, the company contacted the French interior ministry and was directed to order the plane to return to Marseille.

After the plane landed, French police drove Tatevossian to a psychiatric clinic in nearby Aix-En-Provence, French sources said, but it was not know for what reason.

The Soviet consulate in Marseille refused to comment on the affair. Airport sources said the consulate sent a representative and a doctor to the airport to "calm" Tatevossian, a resident of Erivan in Armenia, during the morning's incident.

Whether the Russians were tourists or what their jobs were remained unknown.

Yemens Agree On Unity Steps

CAIRO (AP) — Negotiators from North and South Yemen reached an agreement Monday that outlines steps toward unifying the two Red Sea countries, the Middle East news agency reported.

In four weeks of border clashes between the Yemens, each side had accused the other of trying to impose unity by force.

Chili's Silent Day Already Silent

SANTIAGO (AP) — Chileans stayed home Tuesday in a "day of silence" to protest President Salvador Allende's programs to lead Chile "down the road to socialism."

The protest organized by the country's anti-Marxist opposition had little visible effect on the capital since a prolonged country-wide strike of truckers and shopkeepers has closed most commercial establishments.

Three More Killed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A sniper killed a teenage British soldier with a single shot in Belfast's Roman Catholic Lower Falls area Tuesay. British security forces found two more bullet-riddled bodies on a lonely road near the Irish Republic border.

The bodies were found beneath roadside hedges near the border village of Newtownbutler in County Fermanagh after an anonymous telephone caller advised police the area should be searched, an army spokesman said.

The shootings raised the death toll in slightly more than three years of Northern Ireland violence to 618.
